SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS.

Having undergone a course from Mdlle Mendoli I can state with pleasure that not another hair had the growth of which I was aware I have removed
SEVEN, SIX, SEVEN, AND UP TO SEVENTEEN THOUSAND HAIRS.
Those being individual cases, this may seem to some an unwarranted statement, but to women who may be afflicted by possibly six or seven years applications of the various curse, depilatories, etc., it will be welcomed. They know that all of these curse have positively increased the growth from hundreds to thousands, for they remove the tops of the hairs and leave the roots, but I remove what they leave. Of course, my treatment has to be given personally, and the expediency depends upon the lady to be treated and her skin. I will give full details and a

LIFE IN LONDON AND THEREABOUT.

(CHRONICLED BY SIR HENRY LUCY.)

Lord Morley's Reminiscences—Parnell for the Irish Office—A London Tragedy—The Dublin Convention—An Ex-Home Secretary at the Front.

WESTMINSTER, Nov. 17.

The life of Sir Charles Dilke is promptly followed by another important contribution to the inner history of home politics during the last 30 years. Lord Morley's Reminiscences, to be published to-morrow in two portly volumes, supplement Dilke's books, mainly in respect of the vicissitudes of the Home Rule question. Dilke and Chamberlain in the early stage of their alliance were Home Rulers. Dilke remained so to the end, though his personal interest more directly lay in the field of foreign politics. Chamberlain became the bitterest and most powerful opponent of his early creed. He marshalled and successfully led the Liberal revolt which destroyed Gladstone's first Home Rule Bill. He became the mainstay of the Unionist party ranged under the titular leadership of Lord Salisbury, and thereafter to the tragic close of his life enjoyed the companionship and confidence of the class he before finding salvation denounced as those "who toil not neither do they spin." Faithful to the last John Morley fought for Home Rule, and more than any man since Mr. Gladstone preserved it from permanent wreckage.

Mr. Morley's personal relations with Parnell before the downfall of the Irish leader were habitually intimate. Parnell, who kept his own followers in the House of Commons at a distance they bitterly resented, unbosomed himself to the Englishman with rare frankness. I remember being in the lobby in the House of Commons late on a night shortly before the O'Shea divorce case came into court, when Parnell, making his first appearance at the sitting, crossed the floor with rapid footsteps. Seeing me he stopped and conversed for a few minutes. When he resumed his passage to the library, Dick Power, the Parnellite Whip, asked me if I could tell him whether his Chief proposed to take part in the debate then going forward. Considering the intimate relations ordinarily subsisting between a party leader in the House of Commons and his Chief Whip this incident, trifling in itself, throws a flood of light upon Parnell's treatment of his followers when in the plenitude of his power.

During Mr. Morley's first term of service at the Irish Office, and later when he sat on the Front Opposition Bench, Parnell frequently visited him, and conversed on current phases of the Irish question. In violation of his vow never to break bread in the house of a Saxon, he even occasionally dined with him. One such occasion, it must have been the last, happened when Mr. Morley was staying at Brighton in the winter of 1890. As soon as he left Mr. Morley made a note of their prolonged conversation. At that time the Unionist Government, buttressed by the adhesion of Chamberlain and Hartington, was tottering to a fall. So imminent was a general election, and so certain of its result was Gladstone, optimistic to the last, that he, in consultation with Mr. Morley, occupied himself in drafting a Liberal Cabinet. Doubtless not without knowing what was Gladstone's feeling in the matter, Mr. Morley, "guilelessly" as he says, asked Parnell would it be possible for him to accept the post of Chief Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant. Parnell without show of the amazement that would have filled the House of Commons had it known that such a dramatic turn of events was ever dreamt of, emphatically declined to consider the suggestion. A week later, the co-respondent in the O'Shea divorce case was adjudged guilty by the Court, and Parnell's career as leader of a party that sometimes arbitrarily held the balance between British Liberals and Conservatives finally closed.

This idea of Irish home affairs being committed to the care and control of an Irishman was not new in Liberal circles. Whilst still a member of Gladstone's Ministry Chamberlain advocated it. In the spring of 1883, when the Government of Ireland had broken down in the hands of Forster, he wrote to Mr. Morley, then editor of the "Pall Mall Gazette":—"I wish you would openly advocate Shaw as Chief Secretary. It would be an appeal to the electors to aid in the creation of a new policy, and they might rise to the occasion. If they did not at least the English Government would be free from reproach and would have tried to rule Ireland by the Irish." To-day, a quarter of a century after this letter was written, a Convention of Irishmen is seated in Dublin, endeavouring to give effect to Chamberlain's dream. The Shaw referred to was an Irish Home Rule member, who after Parnell was ousted from leadership of the Nationalists for a short time attempted to fill his place.

It is a familiar well-established fact that the British public, being engrossed with one subject, cannot concern itself with another contemporary incident. Two things of widely different character are going forward just now, either of which would in normal times have been made the topic of the hour. One is the discovery in a London Square of the mutilated remains of a woman. From time to time, murder enveloped in mystery exercises enthralling fascination on the public mind. The nocturnal deeds of Jack the Ripper are a well-known case in point. The murder and mutilation of the French woman, and the discovery of her remains have close resemblance to the succession of tragedies that some years ago thrilled London. Yet so absorbed is the public with the progress of the war, interest just now intensified by proceedings at Petrograd, with disastrous results in Italy, that the newspapers, instinctive judges of public feeling, devote comparatively small space to the topic.

The other event eclipsed by the war is the Irish Convention. This is by far the most important political event of recent times in the history of Ireland. It is true that since the conference is held with closed doors there is no opportunity for report of its proceedings. That is, however, a circumstance which before the war would not have precluded speculation on the subject. To-day the convention proceeds with its work undisturbed by notice, commentary, or criticism from outside, an excellent condition of itself, but a striking sign of the times.

Casual reference to its labours publicly made, whether in Parliament or outside its walls, is happily confident in the hope, if not in the assurance, that all is going well, and that the tangled skein of the government of Ireland, which has long baffled English statesmen from, and before, Gladstone's day is on the eve of unravelment. The actual situation is authoritatively described in a sentence from a letter received this morning from one of the principal members. He writes: "In the convention we still do well, but the sad condition of the country outside militates against our chances of success, that is success at the moment."

I have received a cheery letter, written from the front by the ex-Home Secretary who gave up an income of £20,000 a year, earned at the Bar, to serve his country in the field. "There has been 'no moaning at the Bar' at my departure," he writes, "but I mean to come back when this is over and resume my old habits. I'm amused to see my good friends Hogge and Pringle are making merry at my 'staff' job. In point of fact I'm going round squadrons and wings, and they are welcome to share my experiences of bombs and shells before Ypres. All I stipulated was that I should not be given a lawyer's job in the field. I think I shall end as a balloonist, and come down in a parachute, like the ladies in pink tights, who start from the Crystal Palace. At any rate, I've got lots to learn and plenty to do, and although the army is not a paying occupation, they open an account for you at Cox's without asking your leave, and give you a sovereign a day."

You cannot have ill-health and Clements Tonic, too. Neither can you have Insomnia. Get a bottle and try it. A few doses soon make the weak nerves strong. All chemists.—Advt.

LOANI.

THE NEW RUBBER COUNTRY.

(BY BEATRICE GRIMSHAW.)

II.

IN THE WILD.

But one has not to call upon the eye of faith for quite all these things, even now. Land across the mud flat (preferably at high tide), and come up to the one rubber plantation that already exists.

The walk, to anyone not sated with tropical wonders—and even to many who well might be—is full of beauty and strangeness.

Vast primeval forests, shutting out all the sky save a narrow heat-pale strip that winds as the track winds crookedly along; air like the heavy, hot green water of the coral seas; one butterfly, immense, fiery-blue, sailing straight and steadily as a fish sails through the deeps . . . .

Sounds of strange birds, unseen; the aeroplaning hum of the great hornbill, as it flies above the tree tops; the harsh, barking call of birds of Paradise; the drum of the cassowary, maybe miles away; something small and happy that sits aloft and flutes—"sweet, sweet, piercing sweet"—as ever did "Pan in the reeds by the river.". . . .

Smells of ferny-wet places; of damp orchids in the elbows of old, parasite-netted trees; of gums that drip, perfumy, amber and ivory-coloured, in stalactites down trunks and branches; of ginger, trailing cream and orange flowers; of bizarre, sorcerous blossoms growing high on thorned lianas, and sending out clutching odours from the witch cups of flesh-red. . . .

Mocking fruits about the track, like goblin food of fairyland; strange strawberries on 2ft stalks; scented yellow-green apples; make-believe nectarines with pink velvet cheeks; pale green grapes growing on tree trunks; red cherries, currants of vivid Tyrian purple hanging on low stalks like lily-of-the-valley flowers; damsons, plums, immense, blue, bloomy. . . . Are they eatable? In the fierce heat of a November morning one craves for the cool sweetness that seems so lavishly offered. . . . No; almost every fruit is either uneatable or poisonous, and even the natives do not agree about the rare exceptions, so it is best to take no chances. . . .

Tree ferns, fountains of translucent green; the seven-foot croziers of great single ferns; maidenhair palms, like maidenhair fern, 20 and 30 feet high; the betel palm, with its stem as slim and white as a lady's neck, and as tall as a schooner's mainmast; trees with buttressed roots, that shut in triangular rooms, where you might sit and dine; trees standing on as many long legs as a beetle; the crimson pillar of the "hitau" soaring through the mass of green like a trumpet note. . . .

Bird's-nest ferns 50ft up in air, as big as dining-room tables; the spotted snake-brown flowers of an orchid; the rosy stars of another; parasite growths like centipedes a hundred feet long, nipping the whole column of some forest king with innumerable deadly limbs; others coiled python-wise up stately trunks, taking the full height of the tree in two or three wreathing coils, and then throwing a cruel head and neck about the crown; others like devil-fish, dangling long, leprously spotted arms from above, and reaching out for what may come within their grasp. . . .

It seems alive, this Papuan forest, though in no pleasant way. It shoots itself dynamically up towards the sky; it fights and wrestles, tree with tree; it slays, and feeds on the giant corpses of its slain; it struggles with demon forms that clutch and hold it; in its turn it waylays and clutches you—make three steps off the track, and you will need a clearing knife to get back again. Here, in the untamed interior of New Guinea, nature is in truth "Nature red in tooth and claw," and as you pass, a small forceless thing creeping along the one narrow thread of safety that man has laid through this welter of primeval forces, you feel that man himself counts for little in the scheme of things. . . .

THE WORK OF MAN.

Of a sudden there come a break of sunlight somewhere ahead, and a waft of pure, cool air. There is a steep climb of some minutes, light increasing, air growing fresher, and then—

Man counts for something after all. Here, for some hundreds of acres, the forest has been cut and burned and uprooted away, and the sun comes in, and the free winds blow from Papua's "icy mountains" (indeed, there is ice on the tops of the unseen 13,000-foot giants of the range, every night and morning), and for a long way the track one follows runs across a plain of grassy ground, lying like a huge lake amid the dark masses of the bush. The plain is full of light fluttering shrubs, radiating away in star-shaped avenues. In the freshness of the morning wind, and the free, flooding sun, these beautiful slight trees seem to laugh and dance, every leaf twinkles, the shadows leap. One could fancy them creatures suddenly let loose from the darkness of the mournful encompassing forest, and merrily rejoicing in their freedom. . . .

There is an impression of an ornamental park about this pleasant clearing, on which we have so suddenly come. It has pretty streams, with glossy-leaved scarlet-budded trees planted beside them; coconut palms border the walk in places, and the light, fluttering trees that cover the plain are planted with careful regularity. Nevertheless, there is nothing about the place but what is severely useful. The coconuts are meant for commercial purposes, the handsome trees by the streams are Ficus elastica, a special kind of rubber, set there to drain the soil, since they are notoriously thirsty, and the delicate light trees, with their air of aristocratic elegance, are indeed the true aristocrats of all plantation life—the famous Para rubber.

Look on this golden tree wherever you meet it, with respect, for not from all the dairy cattle herds of Australia have such fortunes been milked as from the wonderful Para. He who owns but a few ten thousands of these trees will never thirst or hunger all his days, nor will his children nor his children's children. There will be all the pleasant things of life for them—travel, and town and country houses, and swift motor cars, and fine riding horses, rich clothes and wines, and costly furniture. He who desires better things can have them from his kindly trees. They will give him the pictures and books and music that the world has approved; they will put the right of generosity in his hand; they will grant him leisure, and the power of his own will, and mastership of his life, and freedom—the last, best gift of all. And they will do it cleanly. There is no taint of doubtful bargaining, of transactions legally but not morally defensible, of the many dirty puddings that hungry dogs must eat, about the wealth that trickles, pure and honest, from the white milk of the Para. It is honest, clear through.

And though that scarcely matters to a generation that has had its nose held tight to the grindstone of practicality by war's hard necessities, it is wealth that in every detail of its getting carries beauty.

Come and see the milking. The Papuan labourers, dressed simply in a couple of pandanus leaves apiece are hurrying about among the trees emptying the small latex cups that are attached to the trunks, into their buckets as they go. There is a spiral cut in every tree, carefully incised through the outer bark. From the end of this each day is peeled a wafer-like strip, allowing the sap to drip down the small spout that is thrust into the trunk, and trickle into the cup. Each boy taps about two hundred trees a day. There are plantations where three hundred or more are tapped by one boy, but many people think the trees are injured by the hurry and consequent carelessness. The Papuan labourer is doing astonishingly well at rubber work, still, one must not expect miracles of "hustle" from him.

THE PARA LATEX.

The latex, gathered into buckets, cannot be told from ordinary dairy milk by the eye, and scarcely by the nose, for it has a fresh pleasant smell, not at all unlike milk just taken from the cow. It looks so drinkable, carried along white and bubbly, under the green trees, this hot morning, that one almost longs to sample it.

A native—two natives—did long to sample it, thus, at a western plantation, some years ago. The boys had all been told that they must not put the latex in their mouths, but it looked good, and smelt good, and perhaps these two had been cattle-keeping before. Anyhow, they set down the bucket and each had a good drink from a latex cup. Nobody would know, they argued.

In less than an hour there was screaming and terror about the boys' huts. A manager was fetched, and everything done that could be done—away in the wilderness. Nevertheless the two boys were buried before sundown. If a couple of skilled surgeons had been at hand on the moment to perform hasty abdominal section, and remove a large chunk of solid rubber, set by the gastric juice, from each boy's stomach and intestines, they might have been saved—and might not. But in the bush country of Papua, black and white take their chances.

It has not been recorded that any other native has drunk rubber latex since.

IN THE GARDEN.

WINTER-FLOWERING SWEET PEAS.

Since the creation, a few years ago, of the winter-flowering "Spencer" strain of sweet pea, it has had an increasing number of admirers, and larger areas are being annually devoted to its cultivation. Its popularity in Australia is largely due to New South Wales experts, who have given great attention to it, and have raised many new and superior varieties of this strain of sweet pea. These new creations are of robust habit, and, under good cultivation, produce a profusion of large perfumed flowers of rich and varied colours. In the more favoured districts the time has now arrived for making the first sowing of seed, but in the colder parts, where sharp frosts and snow occur, the seed should not be sown in the open till August, for these early-flowering sweet peas will not bloom there in winter. Sweet peas should be grown in a sunny and sheltered situation, and in deeply and thoroughly worked rich light loamy ground if good results are desired, but they do well and freely produce flowers in any deep, friable, fertile soil that has been brought to a good tilth. Should it be necessary to enrich the ground, give it a good dressing of well-decomposed waste from the cowyard or sheep pen, and thoroughly mix this with the soil. On no account use waste from the stables—for that is too rich in ammonia to be a suitable fertiliser for the sweet pea plant. It is hardly possible to devote too much attention to the preparation of the ground, for no plant responds to liberal treatment more readily than the sweet pea. Any extra labour in this direction will be amply repaid at the flowering season. Where it is proposed to grow the sweet pea in large quantities it will be advisable to lay out the ground in rows running due north and south, for then the plants will receive an equal amount of sunshine on both sides. The distance apart of the rows should be regulated by the height of the variety; for instance, if it grows 4ft high, the rows should be 4ft apart. The seed should be sown thinly and evenly in shallow drills, and left covered with leaf mould or fine, light soil, to the depth of about half an inch. Should the resulting seedlings grow too thickly, pull out the weaker ones, which will prevent overcrowding and allow the remaining plants room to grow vigorous and healthy. The young seedlings should be regularly but judiciously watered in dry weather, and when they are about 3in high supports should be fixed close to and parallel with the rows for their stems to climb up.

HERBACEOUS GAILLARDIAS.

Few dwarf perennial plants produce a greater profusion of brilliantly coloured flowers during the hotter months than the herbaceous gaillardias. This applies particularly to the newer forms of the grandiflora and grandiflora maxima strains, whose large flower heads are borne on long stalks well above the foliage, and therefore are displayed to advantage. The plants grow about two feet high, are of vigorous habit, and produce variously coloured flowers, the prevailing hues of which are brownish-red, crimson, purple, and orange-yellow, which are charmingly blended in some of the blooms. These easily cultivated plants withstand a long period of dry weather remarkably well, and continue to flower under adverse conditions, and are, therefore, admirably adapted for planting in gardens where only a limited supply of water is available in summer. Established plants when growing under favourable conditions produce flowers all the year round, but more profusely during the hotter months. Herbaceous gaillardias can hardly be misplaced in the garden, and they add charming variety to their surroundings when judiciously planted amongst other perennials of a similar height. If well-rooted, healthy seedlings are planted now they will bloom freely in late summer and autumn. The cut flowers keep quite fresh in water for many days, and are very useful for dining and drawing room decoration.

NOTES.

Pentstemons, especially the newer "gloxinia" flowering strain, are producing their showy flowers in great profusion this season, and making an attractive display. Their flowering period will be considerably extended if the old stems are cut off as soon as the last blooms they carry fade, and if the surface of the ground about the plants is liberally mulched with well decomposed manure from the cow yard or sheep pen. Pentstemons respond to liberal treatment, and under such conditions produce a maximum development of comparatively large, beautifully coloured flowers.

Bouvardias in favourable situations are flowering profusely, and have a fine floral effect. To keep them in that condition during the hotter months the flowers should be cut off as soon as they fade, the plants should be liberally watered, and the foliage occasionally hosed in dry weather. If the soil in which the bouvardias are growing is not rich give the plants an occasional watering of weak liquid manure at the roots, and that will assist them in developing fine flowers. Bouvardias produce their beautiful flowers on the current season's growth, and when that is kept in a healthy, vigorous condition the plants will bear a surprising amount of bloom.

If it is desired to have pansies in flower in winter in the more favoured districts, seed should be sown this month, or early in the next. At this season the seed is best sown in well-drained earthenware seed pans or shallow seed boxes, that have been filled nearly to the rims with light, fairly rich, sandy soil, pressed rather firmly down. On the smooth surface sow the seeds very thinly and evenly, leaving them only lightly covered with vegetable mould or fine soil; then place the seed pans or boxes in a shady position. Keep the soil moist but not wet, and never allow the resulting seedlings to suffer from the want of moisture at the roots or they will become stunted in growth. To ensure vigorous and healthy growth the young plants must have an abundance of air, and be gradually inured to the light, but not direct sunlight, until they become strong.

The various kinds of dianthus, particularly those known as Indian pinks, that have been flowering since early in the season, are now rather unsightly. If the old flowering stems are cut off, and the ground about the plants lightly loosened with a hand fork, and then mulched with some well-decayed manure, and watered occasionally, the stools will produce an abundance of bloom in late summer and autumn.

Plants that are raised from the best and most carefully selected seeds of the double flowering strains of annuals, as, for example, African and French marigolds, and zinnias, produce a certain percentage of plants having single blooms. But these should be promptly removed, or they will considerably mar the floral effect. More seeds of these plants, also of balsam, cosmos, portulacca, and sunflower (single and double flowering) may now be sown to provide plants for flowering later in the season.

Many gardeners raise the beautiful flowering tuberous rooted anemones and ranunculuses annually from seeds, and now is the time to sow them. In a bed composed of fairly rich, light soil in an open and sheltered position the seeds should be sown in the ordinary way. The resulting seedlings should be partially shaded from hot sunshine until they are strong enough to withstand open-air conditions, and should never be allowed to suffer from the want of water at the roots. With ordinary attention the plants will produce a profusion of bloom in late winter and early spring in the coast districts.

GLASSHOUSE.

On calm days air should be freely admitted to the glasshouse, and on warm, still nights the sashes may be left partly open. Judicious attention to this will have the effect of promoting vigorous, sturdy growth, all other things, of course, being equal. Adequate shade against hot sunshine must be provided, and the watering and syringing must be regular in order to keep the more robust growing foliage plants in a healthy, vigorous condition.

The earliest-started gloxinias are now freely producing their lovely flowers, and making a fine display. These plants will be greatly benefited by receiving an occasional watering of weak liquid manure at the roots, as will also caladiums and other softwooded foliage and flowering plants that have filled their pots with roots. Care must be taken not to wet the foliage with the fertiliser, or it may be disfigured.

Tubers of the winter flowering gesnerias, such as G. zebrina, may now be started. Use well drained pots, and a rich, open compost. Do not place the tubers too thickly in the pots, nor cover them too deeply with soil. Water sparingly until growth becomes active. These highly ornamental foliage and beautiful flowering plants well repay any extra attention bestowed upon their cultivation.

Clerodendrons, dipladenias, and other climbing plants should have their growths trained evenly over their supports, so that when in bloom they will be seen to the greatest advantage.

Seeds of calceolaria, cineraria, cyclamen, and primula may now be sown to provide plants for flowering in winter and early spring. In well drained seed pans that have been filled nearly to the rims with fine, light soil pressed rather firmly down, sow the seeds on the smooth surface very thinly, and evenly, and leave them only lightly covered with fine soil or white sand. Then place the seed pans in a cool, shady position in the structure. The soil should be kept moist but not wet, and when the seeds have germinated the seedlings should have an abundance of light and air, but must be protected from direct sunlight until they are strong.

THE CHURCHES.

NON-EPISCOPAL CHURCHES.

The New Year has dawned at a moment when there is quite unprecedented interest in the projected union of the three great non-episcopal churches—the Presbyterian, Methodist, and Congregational—and there are many who express confidence that the spirit in which this question is now being considered justifies the hope that the year 1918 will witness most important developments. Commenting upon the subject yesterday, the Rev. Harold Wheen, who acted as convener of the committee in the Methodist General Conference which dealt with the matter, said that never before was the question such a live one. Rather serious doctrinal difficulties that had seemed a generation ago to be an insuperable barrier to organic union had practically disappeared. Speaking broadly, any Presbyterian or Congregational minister would now be welcomed as a doctrinal exponent in Methodist congregations, and probably the same would be true of Methodist ministers in relation to the other churches. The real difficulties now were those surrounding church polity. One of the knottiest questions was the appointment of pastors. In the Presbyterian and Congregational Churches it was the privilege of the congregation to call its own ministers, whereas in the Methodist Church the conference held the right to make appointments, although a via media had already been achieved in that the Methodist congregation through its quarterly meeting could invite its ministers, the invitation carrying considerable weight in the decision of the stationing committee of the conference. There were also difficulties in connection with the adjustment of large funds, but these were not insuperable. The influence of the great war was having a marked effect upon opinion in Australia. Presbyterians and Methodists were closely associated in matters relating to the spiritual oversight of the troops. Never was the time more opportune for the union that was proposed, and he expected that real progress would be registered as the result of the negotiations which were now proceeding.

WORLD-WIDE WEEK OF PRAYER.

In most of the churches to-morrow the services will be specially adapted to the first day of the world-wide week of prayer in connection with the war, the observation of which was recently requested by the King. A form of service containing special prayers and suffrages has been prepared for use in St. Andrew's Cathedral, and references to the significance of the day will be made throughout the State.

The Tuesday meeting for united prayer, arranged by the Evangelican Alliance, will be associated with the usual Tuesday meeting for intercession held in Pitt-street Congregational Church next week. The special topic for the day is prayer for the nations and their rulers. The Rev. G. Thompson, the hon. secretary of the New South Wales Evangelical Council, will give the address. Prayers will be led by the Rev. Joseph Robertson, M.A., and others.

The president of the Methodist General Conference, the Rev. Dr. Carruthers, will to-morrow conduct intercession services at Cobar, and will during the week lecture at Dubbo.

Ther are to be special services in the Randwick churches to-morrow, and a united service for prayer will be held in Allison Park at 8.30 p.m. The combined choirs of the Anglican, Presbyterian, and Methodist churches will sing at this service.

On Monday a day of prayer will be held in the Protestant Hall, Castlereagh-street, from 11 a.m. till 9 p.m., divided into hourly services led by members of various denominations.

The Anglican Archbishop of Sydney, the Most Rev. Dr. Wright, left during the week for Tasmania, where he will spend a month's holiday.

The Rev. Canon Charlton, rector of St. Barnabas', George-street West, has accepted the general secretaryship of the Home Mission Society of the Sydney diocese.

The adjourned meeting of the Sydney Diocesan Synod, held for the purpose of appointing a canon of St. Andrew's Cathedral to fill the vacancy created by the death of the Rev. Canon Mervyn Archdall, will be held at the Chapter-house next Friday afternoon. There are five nominations for the office, namely, the Rev. Canon Goddard (hon. Canon), rector of All Saints', Petersham; the Rev. E. H. Lea, Rector of St. Mark's, Darling Point; the Rev. W. J. Cakebread, Rector of St. Jude's, Randwick; the Rev. E. H. B. Claydon, Rector of St. Luke's, Concord and Burwood; and the Rev. W. L. Langley, Rector of All Saints', Woollahra, with Edgecliffe.

The choir of St. Jude's Church, Randwick, under the leadership of Mr. Arnold Mote (choirmaster), visited the Randwick Military Hospital recently and sang carols. The men, who were unable to leave their beds, enjoyed the singing very much. The rector of the parish (Rev. W. J. Cakebread) is one of the chaplains to the hospital.

Archbishop Kelly will administer confirmation in St. Mary's Cathedral to a number of adults after the 11 o'clock Mass to-morrow.

According to the Australasian Roman Catholic Directory for 1918 there are in the diocese of Sydney 201 churches, 259 priests, 256 religious brothers, 1545 nuns, 154 primary schools, 50 superior day schools, and 33 colleges and boarding schools.

The Rev. W. J. Lockington, S.J., rector of St. Patrick's College, Melbourne, has been appointed Superior of the Jesuit Order in Australia, in succession to the Rev. John Ryan, S.J., whose term of office has expired. The new head of the Jesuits here was born in New Zealand.

The Rev. Harold Mackie, formerly of Grafton, has been inducted to the Presbyterian charge of Leura and Wentworth Falls.

The Rev. James Lamont, formerly of Mosman Presbyterian Church, recently underwent a rather serious operation in London.

The Rev. W. A. Thompson will be inducted to the parish of Junee by the Presbytery of Wagga on an early date.

The Rev. S. J. Hoban is visiting Auckland, N.Z., and will conduct a series of services there, under the auspices of the Central Methodist Mission.

In view of the call for special intercession, the Methodist Ministers' Association will make their first meeting for the new year, on Monday morning next, entirely devotional in its character.

Following the lead of the New South Wales Methodist Church, steps are being taken in connection with the Victorian Methodist Church to place the Christian Endeavour in charge of the Sunday School Department.

The Rev. L. M. K. Mills, the Methodist missionary in the Riverina district, is acting as supply at Cowra until the ensuing conference.

In response to the appeal of the president of the Conference, the Methodist churches have contributed generously to the memorial fund in connection with the late Chaplain D. D. Hunter.

The Methodist Sunday School department is considering a scheme for the formation of a Girls' Guild.

The need for the formation of intermediate Christian Endeavour societies is being urged upon the Methodist churches by the Young People's department.

At Macksville the Methodist congregation has provided a parsonage, which was opened last Saturday afternoon. In the same circuit a new church is in course of erection at Bowraville. At Alstonville, also on the North Coast, a new parsonage, erected at a cost of £1000, was opened by the president of the conference during his recent visit to the Ballina circuit. The Eastwood congregation is taking steps to provide a church building, having for several years conducted divine service in a public hall.

The annual conference of the Australian Student Christian Union opened at Mittagong, and will continue until next Thursday. The Rev. F. H. L. Payton, of Melbourne, will preside. The speakers include the Rev. N. J. Cocks, the Rev. A. H. Garnsey, of St. Paul's College, the Rev. Dr. J. McK. Stuart, the Rev. J. W. Burton, the Rev. J. S. Moyes (Adelaide), and the Rev. P. A. Micklem, rector of St. James', Sydney.

The Church of England Australian Hut Fund for soldiers overseas, inaugurated by Canon Garland, continues to receive encouraging support, and subscriptions are coming in daily. The response made by the parishioners of St. Mark's, Darling Point to their rector's appeal for £500 by Christmas Day totalled £630. Donations to the fund will be received and acknowledged by the hon. treasurer, Mr. L. S. Donaldson, N.Z. Insurance-buildings, 79-81 Pitt-street, Sydney.

FATHER O'DONNELL.

WOLLONGONG, Friday.

Mr. W. J. Cochrane has received a letter from the Rev. Father T. J. O'Donnell, of Wynyard, Tasmania, who played such a prominent part in the advocacy of "Yes" in connection with the recent referendum, and who is proceeding to the front as a chaplain. He stated that he expected to visit Sydney at an early date.

The transfer by John Power to Wallace Foster Robinson of the Trades Hall Hotel, Goulburn-street, city, has been granted by the Licensing Court.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

AN OFFICER'S NOTEBOOK.

Colonel Elliot Crawshay-Williams was the commanding officer of a battery of Territorial Artillery which was mobilised on the outbreak of war, spent the customary period of training on guard duty on the east coast, was sent to Flanders early in 1915, and finally found its way to Sinai, where it helped to win the battle of Romani. Its fortunes are ably described by its O.C. in "Leaves from an Officer's Notebook." These memoirs have a peculiar interest for Australians. Not only was this battery in very close touch with the Anzac Mounted Brigade during the operations that ended with Romani, but the whole point of view is one that appeals very much to us on this side of the world. The author represents a combination which is not so paradoxical as it might seem at first glance. He is a professional soldier who is also a pacificist by conviction. He hates war. He has seen its agony and squalor, and dirt, in various parts of the world; war is robbed of its glamour for him. Yet, just because he is a sensible soldier, he knows that the only way to have done with it is to wage it thoroughly; the pacificist who takes it lying down will never achieve his amiable ideals. This attitude is evident in every chapter the author writes. So much for his opinion as a practical pacificist; his opinions as a practical soldier on the personnel of the British armies are very interesting, although rather inconclusive. He thinks that the raw material of the new armies raised on a voluntary basis was better than that of the old regulars, but that the difference was counterbalanced by the length of the regular's training. He is an old regular himself. His battery was officered by accountants, solicitors, estate agents, and the like, who were invaluable on the business side. They saved the Government a lot of money, but it was some time before they mastered the fine art of gunnery. His rank and file were mostly clerks, mill-hands, and mechanics. They were as keen as mustard, and fought like devils, but they had to learn the A B C of discipline, which is not servile obedience, but the consciousness that certain definite aims require certain formalities, outward and visible signs, symbols of efficient co-operation. "Part-time" soldiers can be as good as "whole-time" soldiers, given adequate training, and this is where the author finds himself in a dilemma. There must be an interval for training; he cannot escape the conclusion that this side of the millennium a country must have a standing army to hold the line while the proverbial millions who spring to arms at their country's need are taught their job.

Perhaps the most interesting chapters of the book are those which describe the operations ending with the battle of Romani, a victory that was not only a tactical triumph, but can claim to have been strategically decisive in this theatre of war. The mixed force that won it had had a gruelling time. They had experienced the seven plagues of Egypt with several modern ones thrown in. They found scant compensation in the fact that theirs was the latest addition to the records of a land route whose written history begins with the Book of Exodus. These crusaders of the 20th century trod in the steps of immemorial conquerors and fugitives, but on their own admission they would, like Henry V., have given much of their dignity for a pot of small ale. They were not even allowed to fight when they came in touch with the enemy. "The Turk came steadily on. With amazing method and deliberation, and a care and forethought that showed him inspired by German brains, he marched forward, entrenching position after position, dragging on his guns, even great guns, building brushwood roads over the desert, constructing redoubts and shelters. It was a great and wonderful advance, and it was all according to programme—our programme. So we waited and waited."

The author's battery was supporting an Anzac mounted brigade, which shared the general eagerness to be up and at 'em. Every one became a little weary of the waiting game. The Anzacs' helios flickered cheerful importunities and besought the gunners to get busy; the gunners chafed under restrictions. The backward movement went on. Commanding positions whose new names on the map commemorate the Anzac Mounted Division were abandoned to the enemy one by one. And, at last, when the enemy was safely trapped, the tune changed. Mount Meredith, Wellington Ridge, and the rest of the lost positions were retaken speedily and systematically. The grand finale was the recapture of Mount Royston. The author's battery was actually bombarding this stronghold when an orderly rode up with a message containing the single word "stop." The orderly added the information that the New Zealanders had stormed Mount Royston. The rest of the story is that "from the far south-west the New Zealand Mounted Brigade, with some English yeomanry and a R.H.A. battery, had swept down on the Turks' left flank. They had caught the force which he had put like an encircling arm round our right flank in a still wider embrace. That arm was now cut off, and with the fate of that arm depended the whole laborious, painstaking expedition which had worked its way out from Syria; which had achieved such wonders in transport and commissariat and marching; which had plodded on and toiled valorously, and got within sight, within a few hundred yards, of its chief aim. The Turks were beaten. Their venture had failed." That is the meaning of the battle of Romani. (Arnold.)

THE NEW RUSSIA.

The author of "Russian Court Memories," published a few months ago, took the view that, while there was a strong pro-German element in Royal circles at Petrograd, the ex-Empress herself was utterly free from its influence. But the logic of events has compelled the writer to modify his opinions. From being the apologist of the ex-Czarina he now in "The Fall of the Romanoffs" denounces her as being the chief cause of the revolution. The Imperial Court was honeycombed with German intrigue; the Czar was loyal and well intentioned, but completely under the domination of his wife, who had surrounded herself with German sympathisers. To make matters worse, she was always ready to listen to the advice of the notorious Rasputin, who is described as "the evil genius of Russia since the outbreak of war." It has been said that Rasputin was in the pay of the Germans. This has never been proved, but, at any rate, he and the German agents worked to the same ends. He was a pacificist, a leader of the "stop the war" party which grew up after the reverses in Galicia and Poland. Like so many of the pacificist tribe, he was quite willing to achieve his ideals by damaging his own country and assisting the enemies of his country. The author is quite unable to discover the secret of Rasputin's influences. He had no graces of person or manner, no education, no faith that revealed itself by works. Though the doctrine he preached was one of asceticism, the irregularities of his own life were the commonplace of Petrograd. Yet he seems to have possessed a curious magnetism that blinded his disciples to his faults. Is it necessary to say that his disciples were for the most part women.

The author speaks rather hopelessly of the revolution and its sequel. Originally it was a national movement to destroy the dark forces of oppression and pro-Germanism. But an appeal to violence is always dangerous, and soon the leaders found that they had released an impulse which they could not control. Originally everything was to have proceeded in an orderly constitutional manner; the ex-Czar and his family were to have been escorted by M. Kerensky to England. But each Government found itself ousted by one more extreme. "At present the country revolves around a completely new and unaccustomed axis, visibly swerving, unable to maintain the proper equilibrium established during the first few weeks after the revolution, leaving the hopes and ideals of the well-intentioned patriots far behind. Even those who welcomed the revolution are distressed at the course that events are taking, for their ideals are smashed, and their hopes disappointed. The position of affairs is becoming tragic indeed, for no one knows what is to be done, and no one has the power to stem the socialistic-anarchical current that is invading the country." The author is convinced that the transition to full self-government was too sudden for a people with the tradition and temperament of the Russians. Czarism with all its faults was, at any rate, a symbol in the eyes of the nation; now that it is destroyed everything is shattered, even religion. They have exchanged despotism for a tyranny that is none the lighter because it is not exercised by a dynasty. The world has yet to hear the full story of the excesses which accompanied the transference of power, for the new regime has far too much appreciation of the uses of censorship to abandon it. Indeed, censorship has renewed its armoury. It is now both official and unofficial, and in some respects the latter form is more aggravating, for it means that by the direction of the Council the type-setters are not allowed to print a paper or the newsvendors to sell it. "Freedom of speech has been set at nought, though it was pompously announced by the revolutionists."

The author sums up the situation in the following terms:—"German influence was at the root of the revolution, and German influence is continuing to direct its development into anarchical channels." The connection of Germany with the revolution was that at the beginning the Russian democracy wished to eradicate the Germanophilism which had infected large sections of the Russian dynasty and bureaucracy. At the beginning the revolution was most unwelcome in Germany, but soon Germany was able to turn it to account. Germany would have preferred to make peace with a Czar, but, failing a Czar, a mob, masquerading as a democracy, would serve the purpose. Germany soon repaired the damage. A "democratic" leader was given special facilities to return to Russia from Switzerland through Germany. Propaganda was multiplied; the purses of German agents were refilled, and so the fine ideals that animated the original movement lost their impulse. There was a time when one of the leaders dared to say to an audience of soldiers and workmen, "You resemble revolted slaves, and not liberated citizens." There is still need for such plain speaking. (Jenkins.)

MR. GERARD'S REMINISCENCES.

Perhaps the first feeling of those who read "My Four Years in Germany," by Mr. James W. Gerard, may be one of slight disappointment. If any man is in the position to make revelations about Germany at war it is Mr. Gerard. For two years he was the Ambassador in Berlin of the greatest neutral Power, as it then was; for two years he watched the interests of several belligerent Powers; for two years he was able to see affairs from a vantage point inaccessible to the ordinary neutral. There were many strange currents in that stormy sea on which the American Embassy like a later Ark had to float after August, 1914, and it required a particularly clear head and an infinity of tact to steer through them. But Mr. Gerard lets us into no secrets of State. Indeed, one's impression of this book is that he has been careful to distinguish between what he knew as a resident of Berlin and what he may have learned in his official capacity. On the latter subject he is often silent when our expectations are highest.

But if Mr. Gerard makes no startling revelations his record is as interesting as that of an alert observer thoroughly acquainted with German conditions and with great opportunities for seeing what goes on must be. It was a busy time for the American Embassy, which on the outbreak of war assumed a hundred abnormal activities. American citizens had to be sent home; thousands of allied subjects sought the American Embassy as a natural refuge, and their perplexities had to be smoothed. America has sometimes criticised her fainéant diplomatists, but there was no lack of energy shown by the corps which Mr. Gerard controlled. Hardly were the refugees disposed of when a new task appeared, the inspection of the prisoners' camps. Mr. Gerard has some interesting things to say about this; he omits to mention that it was through the efforts of himself and his staff that the horrors of captivity in Germany were to some extent mitigated. In recognition of these services Mr. Gerard has received the honour of a British Knighthood. Meanwhile the American Embassy was an object of varied emotions on the part of Germany. They hated it, they affected to despise it, yet they feared it and all that it stood for. Mr. Gerard gives a lively account of his experiences with the German Government. Its conception of a policy towards neutrals was in theory to be "suaviter in modo, fortiter in re." In practice it was either truculent or cringing; it blustered or it fawned. An insult would be followed by an abject display of friendliness, and this again by an attempt to carry off matters with a high hand. The German authorities tried various shifts, but never did they succeed in calling the American Embassy's bluff. (Hodder and Stoughton: Sydney Book Club.)

NEW NOVELS.

In "The Secret House" Mr. Edgar Wallace shows that he has lost none of his dexterity as a contriver of ingenious mystification. Here we have a triumvirate of crime. There is Montague Fallock, the owner of a little scandalous journal which covers his more lucrative profession of a blackmailer on the grand scale. There is Mr. Farrington, a wealthy philanthropist of eminent respectability. Yet those who know him best feel that there may be some passages in his past requiring explanation. Finally there is the occupant of the Secret House, an American millionaire, reputedly mad. His madness seems to take the form of installing enormous electric plants and concealing them from the public gaze. Beside these protagonists are a number of young folk, whose love affairs provide a foil for the sinister activities of the others, a Russian count of dubious antecedents, a lady who wants revenge, and T. B. Smith, a detective of superhuman sagacity. It is Smith's business to establish the identity of the triumvirate, and he does so most successfully, though it would be unfair to divulge how he does it and what it leads to. Mr. Wallace mixes his ingredients with a practised hand, and the result contains enough thrilling sensation to tickle the most jaded palate. In this book there are chapters which contain almost as many casualties as the later scenes of "Hamlet." Within a few pages we have item two murders, item one suicide, item one shooting with intent to kill, item one inexplicable disappearance. Even the imperturbable T. B. Smith, who is used to such things, thinks that it is "a little bit over the odds." (Ward Lock and Co.)

The setting of "Days of Probation," by Miss Louisa Gerard, is a great London hospital; the dramatis personae are, for the most part, the medical and nursing staff of the institution; the story concerns the experiences of a delicately-nurtured girl who, after a sheltered youth, is thrown on her own resources and becomes a probationer. Like many another before her, Hilda Vaughan found the reality very different from her anticipations. As one of her colleagues put it:—"You had some idea of laying a cool hand on the sufferer's brow, or smoothing ruffled pillows, and filling in odd moments by arranging flowers and reading to your patients. You were just a little surprised when you found your nursing consisted of sorting out soiled linen, washing dirty pots, cleaning innumerable brasses, sweeping, dusting, scrubbing, and polishing furniture." Not only was the work squalid and monotonous, but the companionship was disappointing. The author does not for one moment cherish the illusion that all nurses are tender, ministering angels, nor does she allow her reader to cherish it. These nurses had chosen their calling from a variety of motives, some from a genuine vocation, others because they had to earn their living and this was as good a way as the next. But others, on their own admission, were frankly in the profession for what they could get out of it, and this, in many cases, meant a husband. In the hospital which Miss Gerard describes there was plenty of opportunity of meeting eligibles in the shape of doctors and students, nor are the meetings always on hospital business or confined to official hours; in fact, there is fierce rivalry in the nurses' quarters, and the tale of their jealousy and intrigue provides the author with much of the material for an interesting book. MUSIC AND DRAMA.

"A Woman's Letter," under date London, October 31, reviews "The Willow Tree," by Benrimo and Harrison Rhodes. This Japanese phantasy in three acts has a special interest for Sydney playgoers just now, inasmuch as Mr. George Barnum has returned from America on purpose to produce it here on January 26 for the Kathlene Macdonell-Waldron combination at the Criterion. Our correspondent's review of the London performance is as follows:—"This is quite an unusual play, though the theme is the Pygmalion and Galatea story, but treated from the Japanese point of view. An old image maker had carved the statue of a princess, and had put so much of his heart into the work that he was in love with it. There has come to this remote Japanese village an Englishman sore at heart because the girl he loved in England would not marry him. Exiled, he turns his attention to his adopted land, as we Easterns put it 'goes native.' He lives in a Japanese house set in an appropriate garden, ponds of water, irises in bloom and almond trees in flower. Stone lanterns, and he wears the kimono. He even refuses animal food because he has embraced Bhuddism, and in that faith to eat things that have lived is forbidden. His friend, Geoffrey Fuller, is a full blooded young Englishman of modern type, beautifully played by Mr. A. E. Matthews, second to none in portraying the modern young Englishman. Mr. Owen Nares plays the hero, Edward Hamilton. The old image maker brings him the statue of the princess because in the house there is a shrine, and he wanted a goddess for it. There is some comedy in the bargaining, and finally the image is duly inducted into the house and placed in the shrine. The old artist tells the story that if a man places a mirror into the bosom of a statue it will come to life. This is done, and ere long the Pygmalion has persuaded his Galatea that he is very much in love with her. . . . It is pretty and tender. You think of 'Madame Butterfly' and other Japanese plays. The end is always sad. In this play news comes that war has broken out. Geoffrey Fuller brings the tidings, which torment the young exile's soul. Also the English girl he loved has come out to Japan. All this is talked of in the verandah of the house, and the image feels that she is in the way. The 'Japanese way' would be to go and fight for his country. She orders one of the servants to cut down the willow tree behind the house, and she disappears into its heart. A Dryad of the woods. It is lovely and tender, and was beautifully played and put on. I enjoyed it immensely. Whether it will run or not one cannot say. But as plays go it is a little gem of imaginative art."

Recent musical news from America shows that the United States will now cease to be the happy hunting ground of German and Austrian artists as it was during the first three years of the war. Fritz Kreisler, one of the greatest violinists, was wounded on the Austrian side at the Russian front, after which for some time he resumed touring in America with unabated success. At the end of November, however, there was trouble, and the violinist at once voluntarily cancelled 80,000 dols. worth of engagements, at the same time promising to fulfil all charity contracts without compensation. Kreissler's wife is an American, and he himself is personally popular, so that he will be allowed to devote himself to serious composition in New York. Julia Culp, a famous singer, scheduled for an American tour this year, will not come in view of the fact that her husband is one of the personal military chauffeurs of the German Emperor. In Chicago Mme. Melba made her farewell appearance in "La Boheme" on November 22, when a marvellous success is attributed to the Rodolfo, Signor Crimi. Two days later Mme. Melba, who has been travelling incessantly, and at Fort North, Texas, was struck heavily by falling scenery, was replaced as Marguerite by Anna Fitziu. This artist was declared by her ravishing appearance, and the mixture of poetry and realism in her art, backed by a fine voice, to present the best rendering amongst young singers heard for eight years. Muratore, the French tenor, and Baklanoff (Mephisto), were in the cast. However, as regards sopranos, Mme. Galli-Curci's supreme art is consistently lauded; and, no doubt the Chicago Opera Company includes several great artists.

The identity of our audiences' old friend, Maggie MacCann, was temporarily confused by her adoption of the Gaelic form of her name as "Maclann" upon her reappearance with the Highland Society on New Year's Night, but her art secured her a hearty welcome, after her absence of exactly 12 years. Though born in Dundee, the Scottish-Australian mezzo was brought up in Melbourne from childhood, and was widely known as a concert artist on this side before she studied further under Sir Charles Santley, and took up a position in the United Kingdom as a leading Scottish singer. Indeed, Mme. Maclann has appeared at all the Scottish festivals of note in London, where her last engagement was with the famous St. Andrew's Society, at the Fulham Town Hall, on Burns night, January 25, 1917, as she sailed soon after to revisit her sisters in Melbourne. The mezzo-soprano also had the honour of singing arias from "Les Huguenots" and "Mignon" at Dunedin with the London Symphony Orchestra under Landon Ronald. During a period of three and a half years Mme. Maclann lived in America, and she reports a vast pre-war field of engagements open to competent artists. She found strong Scottish societies in each of the great centres, and appeared repeatedly, not only in New York, Chicago, and similar centres, but also at Toronto, Montreal, and throughout Canada. During recent years this artist has made a name as a Burns lecturer (with songs), and her recent success at the Austral Salon in aid of the Red Cross Society was so marked that she proposes to tour Australasia on the lines indicated after the war.

Staff Sergeant-Major William Duns, author of a manual on the Bomb, at one time instructor in bayonet, and also in trench warfare and bombing at the Blackboy Training Camp, W.A., has relinquished these war-like pursuits to visit Sydney with an original play. It seems that Mr. Duns was for some years an actor in Scotland. His new drama is on the beautiful Biblical story of "Esther," and he courageously believes that it will prove a second "Sign of the Cross." Wilson Barrett's drama was produced at St. Louis in 1895, and had realised fabulous sums throughout the United States and in London, where it ran 14 months to packed houses before the author-actor visited Australia with it in succession to Julius Knight. He brought with him an appalling mass of certified statistics showing, amongst other things, that 14½ million people had paid for admission to see it with various companies during the first three years of its existence. Since then innumerable theatrical managers have been looking for a "Sign," only to realise in sorrow and tribulation that there shall be no "Sign" given!

Miss Kate Rooney (Mrs. Kirkham) has arrived safely at her home in New York during the past few months, and writes under date November 18 from Ashbury Park, New Jersey, where she had been spending a fortnight in glorious winter weather full of sunshine. The Sydney contralto, whose farewell appearance here at the Town Hall was for the Royal Philharmonic Society's Anzac Memorial Concert on April 25, has since been assisting in war movements in America.

Sydney folk remembering David Bispham's talents and personal charm during his Australian tour of 1913 will regret to learn that his nineteen-year-old son, Lieut. David Charles Bispham of the Royal Flying Corps, was killed on November 4 during a practice flight at Hendon. Though an American young Bispham was born in London.

Then she saw the place where she stood begin to brighten with a pale yellow radiance—a sort of fallen sunlight, as if the king of day was piercing through the clouds and sending a pallid shaft of light to this unhallowed spot.

She saw everything quite distinctly. The two tawny-coloured dogs, as big as mountain donkeys, which she had thought were carved things of granite, gambolled towards her. One of them put its great head upon her shoulder and bayed loud with a deep, musical note. The other frisked around her. It was horrible, as these immense and ghastly creatures fawned and slabbered upon her in welcome.

. . . The tall man in the black cloak came down the little mound towards her. She saw his face. He was the man she had watched passing through the Palm Court of the Midland Hotel with Peter Fanshawe.

He came up to her with welcoming hands outstretched. The ravaged, beautiful countenance looked down upon her from his height with a fierce welcome. The black eyes blazed. The cameo-cut lips were parted. He was as beautiful as a fallen angel.

"Ah!" he said, and his voice was sweeter than a band of violins played by the masters of the world. "So my lady has come at last."

Violet stared at him, trembling.

He passed one strong, white hand over his forehead and eyes. "I knew," he said to himself in a voice of awed surprise. "I believed that I could call my mate out of the air!"

Violet crouched upon the damp ash of her alpine-stock until it seemed that the very wood would break. "Lord Llandrylas," she said, "I have lost my way upon the moor. Show me the way home, please."

Still his head was a little bent, and he spoke to himself as a man in a dream. "It was all ordained," he murmured—and his voice was like the sound of wind over harp strings. "Oh, I was wrong to have doubted. Spirit of the Mistletoe and Oak, forgive me! Mialgean, hear my prayer of thanks."

The man's arms were lifted high above his head, and his face was raised until the last faint yellow light of the afternoon touched it with a fantastic glory.

"Lord Llandrylas! Let me go home," The cry was sharp, and staccato, and throbbed with terror. Terror had come to the girl at last.

"Come," was all he said in answer, and once again he beckoned and she had to follow. He turned his back upon her, and leapt up to the top of the green mound, where Violet saw an immense slab of granite making a platform. He flung the black cloak from his shoulders. He bent forward and kissed the strings of the great harp. He sat upon the Druid stone and pulled the instrument towards him. A deep soul-searching throb of the plucked strings sent Violet crouching like a flower.

"Listen!" he cried. "You know me for what I am. I am Caradoc David Llewelyn Pantydwr, Lord of Llandrylas, Prince of North Cymry, and the Marches. I am he who has long awaited your coming. Moel and Ynad, Llandrylas and Tiangarth, are awaking from their sleep. The King is here, the Queen comes! Listen!"

The two great dogs crouched on either side of Violet. Hardly knowing what she did, she put her arms round them—they were warm and living at least. One of them turned and looked up in her face. The broad head, the black muzzle, and the powerful jaw would have terrified her at an ordinary moment. She had never seen a dog like this—few people ever had. But the great red tongue lolled out in friendship, and there was a look of love in the black eyes.

"Listen!—this is the song of waiting."

"They say he is the greatest harpist in Wales." These words of Gerald's came back to Violet now. The proud head was bowed, the long arms flashed backwards and forwards over the strings, and once again the wild barbaric wail which she had heard as she approached the Druid circle, filled all the air with pain and longing.

She was hypnotised, fascinated as a snake is by some Eastern flute player. She felt as if she was rooted to the spot, incapable of movement or flight. And yet, curiously enough, one side of her brain—the active, business side, so to speak—was working rapidly.

"The man must be mad," she thought, "but if so it is a madness unlike any other I have seen or heard about. He lives in a strange, fantastic world of his own, a world where he is king and supreme. I have strayed into it by chance."

She began to busy herself with plans. Could she possibly turn this strange meeting to advantage? How could she use it to further the campaign? Surely there must be some possibility in it, though at the moment she was at a loss to know what it was.

A shout—a great tenor call, rather—clear and musical as a bell, brought back her thoughts to the present.

"The waiting is over! Through the mountain clouds the Queen is coming."

. . . The music suddenly sank to a muffled throb pregnant with meaning, the very spirit of approach. It was indeed as though someone was drawing near with soft footsteps over the heather, and Violet knew that it was herself that came. And now, instant by instant, the footsteps were emerged in the beginnings of a stately march. The sound gathered volume every second—it was marvellous what a fury of melody was torn from the great instrument. In a few seconds it seemed that a whole diabolic orchestra was at work. There was the crash of the Druid cymbals, the drone of Choric song, and then, coming into the grand harmonic melody, rose the first shouts of ecstasy as if the wild priests of the mountains were at their altars once again and cutting themselves with knives like the priests of Baal.

The great dogs rose and quivered. A low growl escaped from one of them, and his hackles rose. The music had become awful. The figure of the musician seemed to grow larger. To the eyes of the terrified girl his form seemed clothed in gloomy shades, out of the darkness of which his music shrieked with evil triumph. Utterly unnerved as she was, she almost thought she saw a tall black figure standing behind him, and that long arms stretched over his shoulders and mingled with his own, plucking madly at the harp strings. She thought she heard a bleating goat-like laugh—a hideous obligato amid the rush of agonising sound. Then the ground seemed rushing upwards, the mist falling like sheets of grey snow, and everything flashed away.

* * * * *

She came to herself with a sound of rushing waters in her ears like the receding tide. For how long she had swooned she did not know, but as she opened her eyes she felt an arm around her, and saw the face of the harpist looking into her own.

All the wildness and fury had gone. The beautiful dark eyes glowed with tenderness. The pure proud lips were half parted in a smile; there was an extraordinary wistful gentleness upon the face, and it was royal, too.

"Ah, you are better. You were overcome by my music. I can only play like that when I am alone in the sacred places. Then the spirit of the past descends upon me, and the blood of my ancestors speaks."

Violet murmured something and strove to rise. He assisted her to a sitting posture.

"In a minute you will be better—so!"

With the word he placed one long white hand upon her forehead. It seemed to burn like fire, and then she realised it was icy cold. Some strange, magnetic force proceeded from it, for she felt the mists go from her brain, the cramp and inertness from her limbs, and warmth suffuse her body in a flood.

Then she stood up.

"Thank you very much, Lord Llandrylas," she said steadily. "As I told you I lost my way. I am staying at Pwylog with my mother at the hotel. Perhaps you will put me on the right way home."

He did not speak for a moment or two. He regarded her with a curious steadfast gaze.

"Go?" he said at length, and in a slightly puzzled voice like a child. "Go away?"

"Yes, it must be very late in the afternoon. I must get back at once."

"But you are in my kingdom," he said; "I cannot let you go. You are mine now."

Violet felt as if she moved through a scene of some fantastic dream. The man said these extraordinary words in a tone that was almost matter of fact. He made a statement, that was all. It was as though some Eastern despot whose will was utterly supreme had spoken, and a great rush of anger came over the girl. She stamped her foot upon the ground.

"How dare you say such a thing to me, Sir," she cried. "You must be mad to talk like that in the twentieth century, and within three miles of an English town."

He looked at her darkly, and then he smiled.

"She does not know," he said quietly to himself.

He snapped his fingers. Immediately the great dog that had growled leapt at him, and put its paws upon his shoulders. He stooped and seemed to whisper something in its ear, and in a moment it had bounded away into the mist and had disappeared. Violet gripped her alpine-stock.

"Let me pass, if you please, Lord Llandrylas," she said.

He made no sign of having heard her, but still stared in sombre meditation, as if his thoughts were far away from the present. Then she turned and walked away.

RESERVED JUDGMENTS.

KILNER v KILNER.

In this suit Alfred (or Fred) Kilner petitioned for a dissolution of his marriage with Louisa Kilner (formerly Schwilk) on the ground of desertion. Issues were raised on behalf of the respondent of desertion, cruelty, and misconduct.

In giving judgment his Honor reviewed the evidence. The wife's charges of misconduct against her husband had not been proved beyond reasonable doubt to the satisfaction of the Court. His Honor was of opinion that the petitioner had on certain occasions lost his self-control, and offered violence to his wife. The issue of desertion had been raised by both parties. There had been a separation between them since 1914, when the respondent had left the common home, and the parties had never lived together since. If the husband were free from blame for the original separation, or its continuance, he would be entitled to succeed. His Honor, however, was of the opinion that in this matter the husband could not be held to be blameless. The fact was that he had placed his wife in a dominating position in the business which he had successfully established. The result was that there had been violent quarrels between them when he attempted to control his wife in the business.

The position of the husband with regard to the business seemed to his Honor to be most unfair, and he thought it should be put an end to by some arrangement being made which would enable the husband to reap some benefit from his holding in the company. It seemed monstrous that he, as the holder of half of the shares, should receive nothing from the company, which was able to pay the wife salary as managing director as well as bonuses.

Although the respondent's issue of cruelty had been proved, the Court would not grant a decree solely on that ground. Relief on that issue was only given for the protection of the parties. In this case there was no need for such protection, as there was no pretence that the wife was afraid to live with her husband. In fact, she was willing to do so if certain matters were arranged as she desired.

Summing up, his Honor found that both charges of desertion had failed; that the charge of misconduct against the petitioner had not been proved; that the respondent's charge of cruelty had been proved. Both petitions were dismissed. No order was made as to costs.

Mr. R. Windeyer, K.C., and Mr. G. E. Flannery, instructed by Mr. J. J. Jageiman, appeared for the petitioner; and Mr. A. G. Ralston, K.C., Mr. C. G. Davidson, and Mr. Harvey Stephen, instructed by Messrs. Parish and Stephen, for the respondent.

COOK v COOK.

David Anderson Cook sued for the dissolution of his marriage with Agnes Alice Cook, on the ground of desertion caused by her non-compliance with an order directing her to return to her husband. His Honor granted a decree nisi, returnable in six months. The respondent is to have the custody of the two children of the marriage, who are 5½ and 3 years old.

GILBERT v GILBERT.

His Honor dismissed the petition of Annie Louisa Gilbert for the dissolution of her marriage with Ernest John Stanton Gilbert on the ground of his desertion. His Honor was not satisfied on the ground of domicile.

RANDELL v RANDELL.

In the petition of William Henry Randell for the dissolution of his marriage with Florrie Randell, on the ground of desertion, his Honor granted a decree nisi, returnable in six months.

KAZEKOVSKI v KAZEKOVSKI.

Muriel Olga Kazekovski petitioned for a dissolution of her marriage with Sigmond Bruno Kazekovski, on the ground of desertion. His Honor granted a decree nisi, returnable in six months. Petitioner to have custody of the child.

FARRELL v FARRELL.

Frances Emily Farrell sued for a dissolution of her marriage with Leslie Plunkett Farrell, on the ground of desertion. His Honor found in favour of the petitioner, and granted a decree nisi, returnable in six months.

DECREES ABSOLUTE.

His Honor made absolute the decrees granted in the following suits:—Edith Harris v James Harris, Ethel Margaret Martha McCroary v William Bernard (also known as William Thomas) McCroary, Robert Wilson v Margaret Alston Wilson, Elsie Florence Macneill Simpson v Francis George Macneill Simpson, Alma Frances Jefferson v David Jefferson, Violet Mary Rimmer v Thomas Alfred Rimmer, Margaret Jane Hughes v David Hughes, Nicholaas Schaap (otherwise known as Nicholas Sharpe) v Melinda Schaap (otherwise known as Melinda Sharpe).

The magistrate passed a sentence of seven days' imprisonment with hard labour.

RETURNED SOLDIER IN TROUBLE.

Herbert Streatfield, 24, a returned soldier, was convicted at the Water Police Court yesterday on a charge of stealing six tins of sardines, the property of Joseph Frask, the master of an oversea vessel. Streatfield, who said he had been on active service for over two years, and had taken the sardines by mistake, was fined £10, in default two months' imprisonment with hard labour.

REAL ESTATE.

AN "OFF" WEEK.

OUTLOOK ENCOURAGING.

With Monday and Tuesday "off" days this week's business has been confined to three days, and has not quite settled down. The indications are, nevertheless, encouraging for the year to come, as inquiry for properties is being met with almost everywhere, and several transactions are already "in the scales."

Indoor auctions have not been held, but one or two sales on the ground have resulted encouragingly, and several private contracts have been concluded for sales of small properties. Messrs. Raine and Horne, in last Saturday's issue, reported the total of their land sales for the year at £820,449, but the return stopped at Christmas eve. Between then and the new year they made further sales in subdivisions at Bowral (£5745), bringing the grand total of their sales of last year up to £826,194. In addition their monthly return of sales of reversionary leaseholds shows:—Waterloo, £225; Neutral Bay, £600, £100, and £300; and Elizabeth Bay, £1880 and £2800. They have also concluded sales of properties in Cleveland-street, £1855; Oxford-street, £5450; and George-street, £1400.

Messrs. Hardie and Gorman report several sales:—A block of land fronting Margaret-street, Strathfield, £830; cottage residence, Argyle and Stanley streets, Chatswood, £775; block of land at Penrith, 60 acres in area, £660; cottage, Woodlands and Delamere street, Fairfield, £145; block of ground at Station-street, Kogarah, £129/5/; and a block, portion of Jervis Bay Estate, 30/ a foot.

Richardson and Wrench, Limited, have disposed of several lots—a property at Waterloo-street, Strawberry Hills, £1225; farm property at Minto, £1202/11/6; cottage, Canonbury-grove, Dulwich Hill, £475; allotment in Atarmon-street, Artarmon, £237/10/; three lots, Langfield Estate, Terrigal, £536—this works out at between £3 and £4 a foot; Dee Why Park Estate, Dee Why, fourth subdivision, land at 27/6 a foot, and in the second subdivision land at 45/ a foot; allotment at Golf Links Estate, Manly, 15/ a foot; and ground at Faulconbridge for £75.

Batt, Rodd, and Purves, Limited, sold the residence known as Holwell, Darling Point-road, £2200; block of land at Govett-street, Centennial Park, £425; pair of cottages at Read-street, Bondi, £785; brick cottage, Cormiston-avenue, Concord, £675; and three pairs of cottages at Centennial Park for £4050.

Stanton and Son, Ltd., sold during the week: Brick premises, Macquarie-street, Sydney, £7200; brick residence, Brunswick-parade, Ashfield, £2050; brick cottage, Kingston-street, Haberfield, £950; brick cottage, Empire-street, Haberfield, £950; brick cottage, Barton-avenue, Haberfield, £850.

Mr. C. Monro submitted the Wahgunyah Estate, Cronulla, to auction on New Year's Day. Every block was disposed of, including the cottage, at prices from £3 per foot to £4 10s. Total sale, £3700.

Arthur Rickard and Company, Limited, report that the new year opened up very satisfactorily, despite there only being three days for the transacting of actual business. The sales recorded for that brief period compared more than favourably with those of a similar period of the preceeding year. Judging also from the numerous enquiries for all sorts of land, the outlook appears certainly very hopeful. Waterside blocks at Woy Woy, Como, and Pittwater, and farmlets at Toongabbie, and Wentworthville were mainly the choice of the week, but several building sites also found buyers, at Hurstville, Killara, Kogarah, and Belmore.

Messrs. Robert Harley and Sons, held a successful auction sale, on behalf of the Municipal Council of Lidcombe, on Saturday last, when nine of eleven allotments submitted were disposed of, prices ranging from 11s to £1 0s 6d per foot.

Messrs. Backhouse and Goyder held a sale at Katoomba, of the Katoomba North Estate, on New Year's Day. The day, unfortunately, turned out exceptionally wet, with the result that very few attended the sale, and only a few lots were disposed of, at prices from 25s to 20s per foot.

Mr. George Harris reports the following sales:—Cottage, Cooper-street, Strathfield, £550; cottage, St. Anns-road, Merrylands, £395; cottage, Young-street, Watson's Bay, £600; cottage, Kingsland-road, Bexley, £300; cottage, the Avenue, Merrylands, £350; 5 allotments, main road, Merrylands, £400; total sales, £2595.

Phillips, Wheeler, and Co., Limited, report that for last year the amount of sales for city, suburban, and country properties totalled over £116,000. The principal sales were as follow:—Property, 750 George-street, Haymarket, £13,500; terrace, Flinders-street, Darlinghurst and Moore Park, £23,000; large subdivision block of land at Canterbury, £10,000; Cremorne Heights Estate, Cremorne, first and second subdivisions, total about £30,000; first instance to vendor for £7000; large bond store, Circular Quay, £7000; terrace of seven houses, Bourke-street, Surry Hills, £4000; and numerous other properties, suburban and country.

Hugh Duff and Co. (A. T. Carpenter) report having sold a cottage residence, Blakesly-street, Chatswood, £1275; cottage, Pretoria-avenue, Mosman, £862/10/.

Messrs. Piercy Ethell and Co. report having sold Buninyong, Tintern-road, Ashfield, the residence and grounds of Mr. W. E. V. Robson, M.L.A., for the sum of £2600.

Forthcoming sales are:—Batt, Rodd, and Purves, Limited, Long View Estate, Hunter's Hill, at half-past 3 o'clock this afternoon, on the ground, 14 residential sites, practically water frontage blocks. Purchasers will be conveyed by motor car from the Pittwater-road stopping place to the ground. They also have the Baroona Estate, Church Point, for sale on January 26.

Another of to-day's sales will be the Maroubra Beach Estate, on the ground, at half-past 3 o'clock this afternoon. As the name implies, this property is situate at Maroubra Bay, and Mr. H. Dudley is the auctioneer.

Hardie and Gorman's sales announced to come on are:—Lock's Sea View Estate, South Head, on Saturday next; on Saturday week, Mount Pleasant Estate, Cheltenham; February 9, Bishopscourt Estate, Randwick; and February 23, building sites at Sutherland, portion of the Holt-Sutherland Estate. In the rooms on Wednesday next they will submit a number of properties in the city and suburbs.

Richardson and Wrench, Limited, will sell several allotments at Manly, at their rooms, on Friday, 18th instant, and on the following Friday the City Council's leaseholds at the top of William-street.

Messrs. Raine and Horne have three properties to submit to auction, at their rooms, next Thursday.

Next Saturday Stanton and Son, Limited, will offer at auction, on the ground, 63 Government lots at Maroubra. This land faces the tramline, and has also frontages to Maroubra Bay-road. The North Steyne, Manly Beach Estate, will be offered at auction by the same company on Saturday, February 23 next. This estate represents practically the last land for subdivision in this end of Manly—has frontages to Collingwood-street, the tramline, and extends to the lagoon.

In the new railway time-table issued an important departure is being made. A local service for all stations from Hornsby to Cowan is being initiated, with direct connection with the Milson's Point service, thus practically making this area an extension of the Milson's Point line. The number of trains on the extended section is being largely increased, the present service being exactly doubled. Now that a reasonable railway service has been provided, a large increase of suburban settlement can be anticipated as this district gets better known.

COOGEE CARNIVAL QUEEN.

The queen competition, partly in aid of the funds of St. John Ambulance Brigade, Randwick division, resulted in a majority of the voters plumping for the Coogee War Chest nominee, Mrs. H. Goldstein. The final count was: Mrs. H. Goldstein (Coogee War Chest), 31,640 votes; Mrs. W. Upton (Ambulance), 19,981; and Miss N. Hawkins (Shopkeepers), 9496. The crowning ceremony will take place this afternoon, under the direction of Miss Sara Collins. The queen, in her robes, accompanied by 50 maids of honour, courtiers, heralds, and pages, in full court dress, headed by the N.S.W. Government Tramway Band, will march in procession from the Athenaeum Hall along the sea front to the Boomerang Theatre, Carr-street, where, at 3.30, the Mayor of Randwick (Ald. BUILDING MATERIALS.

AN AUSTRALIAN ASBESTOS CEMENT. "DURABESTOS."

"DURABESTOS" is a Durable Building Material of the Highest Quality, composed of Government-tested Cement, reinforced with true Asbestos Fibre.

"DURABESTOS" is the original Australian-made Asbestos Cement Product, and the only hydraulically-compressed Sheet and Slate manufactured in Australia.

"DURABESTOS" is non-combustible, and in finished appearance surpasses all others. A sample will prove this to practical builders.

"DURABESTOS" improves with age, and does not crack, split, or warp.

"DURABESTOS" is approved by the Fire Underwriters' Association, who grant the maximum discounts where this material is used.

For Prices and Samples apply "DURABESTOS," LIMITED, SALES BRANCH: 14 Moore-street, Sydney. WORKS: Cabarita, Sydney. TELS., CITY 2294 and 24.

ASBESTOS IS THE GREEK WORD FOR "INEXTINGUISHABLE." You'll read that in any standard Dictionary. HARDIE'S "FIBROLITE" (REG.) CEMENT, THE AUSTRALIAN MADE ASBESTOS CEMENT SHEETS, have for their foundation the finest Australian Cement, which is reinforced with long, strong Asbestos Fibres.

"Fibrolite" is heat resistant, Fire, Rust, Rot, and Ant Proof. In short, Hardie's "Fibrolite" Sheets are the embodiment of all that the Ancient Greeks meant when they used the word "Inextinguishable."

No matter what you plan to build—specify "Fibrolite" for Roof, Walls, and Linings. It is more lasting and more economical than wood, Steel, or Plaster.

"Fibrolite" is made by the Asbestos Slate and Sheet Manufacturing Co., Ltd., at Camellia, near Sydney.

Send for sample and full particulars. Apply Desk "B."

Also ask about "FIBROLITE" CORRUGATED ROOFING, the only roofing of the kind made in Australia. "FIBRO-C" COLD WATER PAINT, the best substitute for lead paints. Colour card sent on request.

3-PLY WOOD LININGS and "FIBERLIC" BUILDING BOARD, for distinctive interiors, at little cost.

ON THE LAND.

ALONG BUSH TRACKS.

(BY A.R.B.)

To those who travel up and down the countryside, the remoteness of some of the settlements that were among the earliest pioneered is remarkable. Some of these are so near Sydney that the throb of its activities and its bustle can almost be heard. Still they are far away, as the habits and lives of many of the settlers suggest, owing to lack of the means of communication. Take the country between the main southern and western railway lines, as far as Sydney and Penrith and Campbelltown, and there is revealed land that is still being exploited for its timber, but whose value from a settlement standpoint has never been very popular. In between those two lines are many roads, over which the coaches run daily, and here and there a motor mail careers along, past sleepy cottages and farms, and schools which appear to be as numerous as the post-offices. The children going to school greet the driver with an effusive familiarity, and if there is room in the coach it means a lift. From some of these bush schools have gone men who have made their mark in the big world beyond, and now, with the linking up of the University with the public school system, the field has been broadened, and the boys and girls will have greater and more opportunities. These schools have new won traditions now. From them have gone forth boys who have thrust greatness not only on the bush schools but on their country, as the honour rolls in the schoolrooms show.

Along these byroads there are still a few giants of the bush left, that lift their straight trunks up to the sky. The timber getter and the timber merchant have their eyes on them, and they are being felled. Sometimes the coach driver will stop his coach and let the passenger witness the fall of one of these gums. Often as not he will lend a hand to bring one down, the favoured method being the crosscut saw. The saw takes pushing through the green trunk, and the nicety of judgment required to know which way and where a tree may fall only comes with experience. Then come the horse teams, which drag the barrel away to the mills. These lessening belts of timber, valuable for supplying the hardwoods of commerce, bring home the lesson of the need for afforestation. A fellow-passenger on the journey, who has travelled far, tells of the work that is being done with the Australian eucalypts in South Africa—the story of a country whose supply of native timber is limited, determined to build up its forests of gum trees, transplanted from Australia, creating wealth there for the years that are to come. At the top of a steep pinch we catch sight of the mountains and the Nepean Valley, and the view stretches away in all the splendour of a spring day. The coach pulls up for a moment at a little wayside cottage, and an old lady, endowed with that benevolence typical of the bush, comes out with the ever-welcome pot of tea for the driver, in which his passengers share. It's all part of the day's hospitality, and one learns much from the simple philosophy of these dwellers in the quiet places of the land. They live long what to some would be circumscribed lives, but the story of many of them strengthens one's faith in human nature. It often tells of victories won in the early days and of the rearing of a family that have done well. The thought occurs as to what the future of those odd corners will be. Some day with a denser population near Sydney these belts of country must provide for an overflow of population. It may be then that such schemes as the building of the Warragamba dam will be undertaken.

One can go still further away to the mountains and find communities still further removed from the influence of the larger portion of the population of the city. The motor car has made these places more accessible; but the roads are in such a condition that motoring in the winter is often accompanied with considerable danger. Many of these are roads only in name, and very bad bush tracks in reality. There is the country between Wallerawang and Bathurst, and across the ranges to Goulburn. It attracted some of the earliest of our settlers. The progress and development of these districts have been retarded for the want of railway communication. The settlers "keep pegging away" with that characteristic tenacity of the bush people, hoping a railway will come some day. The heavily-timbered country of the highlands in these parts wears a melancholy aspect when the timber has been rung, and the silence of the ranges through which the tracks wind becomes oppressive until a little clearing, with the homestead in the centre, comes into sight. Down the track, perhaps, swings a stockman driving twenty or thirty head of cattle, that to-day bring such high prices, and only a few years ago were hardly thought worth keeping. Overhead is the merry chatter of parrots on the boughs of the dead trees, or sitting along the log fences. Netted fences are the exception, although rabbits abound everywhere. The most important industry in some of these districts is "bunny." The numerous camps of the rabbiters, and the trolly-loads of rabbits going to the nearest railway station or freezing works, show the grip the rabbits have of the country.

There is always evidence of the pioneer. He may have been attracted to the district by coming over the ranges for cattle, and has secured a block of land on which to run them. The slab hut, complete and typical of the country, is soon built. For roofing shingles are more frequent than galvanised iron, owing to its scarcity and high price. This has brought home fuller appreciation of the old-fashioned split shingle, but the iron has a decided advantage when bush fires rage.

THE WOOL TRADE.

FOUR SERIES ARRANGED.

After a very short recess wool appraisements will be resumed in the Sydney market on Monday next. Notwithstanding the holidays this week, appraisers have been engaged on the catalogues comprising the second series for the season in Brisbane. The series was arranged to conclude in the northern centre yesterday, and the appraisers will return in time to take in hand the initial catalogues for the fifth series in Sydney on Monday. Four series in Sydney have been fixed, and appraisements will be continuous from January 7 to February 13. All the 13 firms of wool-selling brokers will submit one catalogue in each of the four series. The limit of quantity for each series is 55,000 bales, and there will be no break between any of the series. If these arrangements are to be adhered to no fewer than 220,000 bales will be appraised in 20 valuing days. The order for the four series to start and conclude is as follows:—

Fifth series, Monday, January 7, to Tuesday, January 15; limit, 55,000 bales.
Sixth series, Wednesday, January 16, to Thursday, January 24; limit, 55,000 bales.
Seventh series, Friday, January 25, to Monday, February 4; limit, 55,000 bales.
Eighth series, Tuesday, February 5, to Wednesday, February 13; limit, 55,000 bales.

NEXT WEEK'S SYDNEY OFFERINGS.

Nine catalogues will be submitted during the five days concluding on Friday next. As the rule is being generally followed of each broker cataloguing the wools according to shearing, the bulk of the offerings next week will be drawn from the early districts. The wools will be largely representative of the western and south-western slopes and plains, with a sprinkling from the tablelands. It promises to be a good selection, and the prices for some of the clips promise to equal if not exceed the highest in greasy so far appraised in Sydney. Included in the principal brands to be offered next week are the following:—

Capel/Gournama, FRW/Harben Vale, FCC/Piedmont, Kalangan, Mensgong, N/Wentworth (Bimbi), Yamma (Naranderra), GKA/North Whoey (Condoonlin), M'warrina (Coolabah), Merton Park/TL/Wagga (Wagga), Berida (Gilgandra), Glenview (Grenfell), Fes/Bugdidjarie (Narrandera), Cowl Cowl (Booligal), Mungerbar/TB (Narromine), WBY (Cassilis), AJR/Boondarra (Mossgiel), Yarrabee (Morundah), JD in dia./Retreat (Illabo), WB conj./Willandra (Booligal), MVF/Oban (Cloncurry, Q.), RP/Beetive (Tamworth), Llangollen (Cassilis), Belalie (Bourke), EJM/Ravensworth (Yass), WGM/Boramidi (Forbes), Marra (Bourke), Miller's Creek/Reid/Iffley/Mascotte (Willow Tree), Neeworra, ABT/Merri Merrigal (Hillston), Coonimbla (Coonambie), HW/Thorndale, DTH/Toulby, JMH/Illilwa, JR/Hillside, R Bros./Clyde, TS/Budda, UW and Co./Llandillo, Austin/Midgeon, Gogendrie, Mogila, S in circle/Collarreen, HFL/Nebea, Wallallom, Clift Bros./Breeza, BH/Warrah, GT/Burathe, MKY/Yarraldool, GB/4D.

SOUTH AFRICAN WOOL POSITION.

Owing to the difference in the methods of purchase of the South African clip to that of the Australian acquisition, by the British Government, considerable uncertainty exists as to the position of wool in South Africa. This uncertainty was increased through the premature reports from London of the purchase before it was actually effected. When the proposal was first made there was a considerable element in South Africa hostile to the purchase, which delayed progress. Some of this opposition was gradually overcome. On November 9 last the Department of Agriculture at Pretoria stated that, in response to the offer of the Imperial Goverment to purchase all wools offered on or before October 31 last, 167,870 bales, or about three-eighths of the total clip, were registered from growers, and that Durban merchants collected 14,815 bales from various districts in the Union. Prior to that date, about 50,000 bales of the current season's clip had been purchased for the British Government. Later advices by post augmented the quantity mentioned by the department on November 9. The later figures gave the quantity offered from each province in the Union as follows:—

	Bales.
Cape Province	90,349
Orange Free State	53,428
Transvaal	19,243
Natal	10,407
Various districts	14,815
Total	188,242

ACQUISITION AND AUCTION.

The original offer of the British Government was to purchase the South African wool production at values on the basis of the Australian acquisition, which was 55 per cent. above pre-war rates. Stocks of both wools and mohair in the Union were taken, and it was anticipated that South Africa would fall into line with Australia and New Zealand; but some wool-growers were ill-advised enough to refuse the offer, with the result that only those who offered prior to October 31 are enjoying the benefits of the acquisition. In the Commonwealth all the wool, except from green sheepskins, was acquired on the /15½ per lb greasy basis; but in South Africa those growers who failed to register their wools for sale to the Imperial Government have to rely on the auction market, which in turn depends upon tonnage for wool, which is exceedingly scarce. The effect of the acquisition and the uncertainty of freights for shipping wool to approved countries like the United States and Japan was to unsettle the principal market, which is at Port Elizabeth. A report on the Bay wool market on November 13 stated that "stocks were large. There were no sales of importance except in short, irregular wools for scouring. A fairly large quantity was offered to-day in the public market, but although prices bid in most cases were above the values under the Government proposals very few lots changed hands, the bulk being withdrawn. This condition of things is due principally to high country costs." According to a report on November 21 there was a moderate demand for super skirted wools of light condition on Japanese account; also a fair demand for light, clean, free wools for scouring. Since then there has been cabled news from London to the effect that some wools are practically unsalable, and that bids for good wools were several pence per lb below the pre-acquisition prices. Briefly stated, those growers who did not offer to sell to the British Government prior to October 31 last can realise at auction. The market has been unsettled, and values in most instances considerably below the rates secured early in the season. Owing to the shortage of tonnage for wool it is doubtful if more than a small proportion of the growers who withheld their wool from the Imperial purchase scheme will be able to sell their clips till after the war.

NECESSITY FOR WOOL CONTROL.

The cable news from London on Wednesday with reference to wool control in the United Kingdom for three years after the war, doubtless came as a surprise to the wool trade; for when wool control in Great Britain was instituted, Mr. Forster stated that it was entirely a war measure, and would not be continued after the war. At the same time that Mr. Forster made that announcement there can be no doubt that control was meant to cease at the expiration of the war; but so much of the unexpected has happened since then that a change of front has to be made in Empire interests. The enemy built up its military strength by economic means, and will endeavour to rehabilitate itself by similar means as soon after the war as possible. How necessary it is to safeguard British and Allied textile interests in wool after the war is shown by the report that in September last the Germans had stripped the factories of textile machinery in eastern and western Flanders and northern France; not so much as a military achievement in occupied Allied territory, but as a means to cripple the textile industry of Belgium and France after the war. The enemy idea being that the economic revival in Germany will be facilitated if the Belgian and French textile trades have to reconstruct machinery, instead of starting the mills, in the principal centres, after the war. Controlling the wool trade in the United Kingdom would probably be one of the means by which the enemy may have the machinery, but not the raw material to bulldoze our Allies economically immediately after, or for a fair period after, the war.

BUYING IN ARGENTINA.

The other portion of last Wednesday's cable mentioned that the British Government, having granted permission for the import of Argentine wools, a syndicate in Bradford is arranging to purchase several thousand bales if freight is obtainable. During the two previous seasons buyers on United States account secured the bulk of the River Plate clip. This season they have more or less stood off the market in the hope of steadying values. Germans are in force in Argentina wool circles, and it has been their policy to force prices at Buenos Ayres against both neutrals and Allies. If the syndicate mentioned in the cable entered the market there can be little doubt that its operations would be watched and prices inflated. The shipping problem, however, will probably be the factor to steady operations there for a good while to come.

SYDNEY WOOL RECEIPTS.

Receipts of wool have been on a moderate scale during the week. The Railway Department continues to truck wool from country stations at the rate of 25,000 bales per week. There is no regulation of quantity by boat. The quantity by rail and boat compares with the corresponding period last season as follows:—

BY RAIL.

Season.	Dec. 29-Jan. 4. Bales.	July 1-Jan. 4. Bales.
1917-18	14,254	490,224
1916-17	16,220	518,469
Decrease	1,966	Decrease 28,245

BY BOAT.

Season.	Dec. 29-Jan. 4.	July 1-Jan. 4.
1917-18	1,938	40,534
1916-17	1,417	66,251
Increase	521	Decrease 25,757

Total seaboard decrease for season to date, 54,002 bales.

MAIZE ON SOUTH COAST.

Recently the Agricultural Department's maize breeder (Mr. H. Wenholz) has been engaged on the South Coast planting seed to ensure a pure supply. The experiment farms of the State are now being restricted to the use of one variety. As these farms do not cover every district in the State where maize is grown, a start was made last year in localising certain varieties. On the South Coast Gold Standard Leaming was sown at Dapto on Mr. George Lindsay's farm, and at Milton on Mr. D. Shepherd's property. At Moruya the variety sown was Goldmine. In addition Boone County White, is being improved at Berry Experimental Farm. It is recognised that by more localising these improved plots better results will be obtained owing to the greater value of seed acclimatised to the district. It has been found that Gold Standard Leaming has given good results in the Illawarra district, and also at Milton. Goldmine has also done well at Milton. Bega is a big maize-growing district, and there is a splendid opportunity for one or more farmers to improve their variety of maize with a view to the supply of seed of good quality to the district.

THE BOT FLY.

FORBES.—Nearly every second horse one sees in Forbes or district at the present time, or to be more precise one might say that 75 per cent. of the horses in use, are adorned with a strip of red cloth, mostly turkey twill, round the neck, or attached to the throat strap of the harness or bridle. To the unsophisticated person it may look fantastic, but the person who puts it there has an abiding faith that it will keep away the bot fly, which is just now very ubiquitous.

FRUITGROWERS.

The executive council of the Fruitgrowers' Association of New South Wales is taking steps to organise amongst growers, in order to combat the claims of the A.W.U., which has cited the association to appear in the Arbitration Court. The branches have been circularised with a view to establishing a fighting fund. The circular letter sets out that the efforts of the council will be directed to raising a strong fighting fund, to fighting the case to prevent the imposition of unfair rates and conditions of labour upon orchardist employers, and to securing from the exemption of the rural industries from the provisions of the Industrial Arbitration Act.

SHALL WE MAKE A NEW YEAR CHANGE?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Letters like those of an "Englishwoman" in Thursday's "Herald" help one to understand why so many people voted No. "Strong" language has been the vogue, but if we want to win the war with the help of Australian recruits the sooner it goes out of fashion the better. The letter preceding "Englishwoman's," signed R. Walker, is an almost sufficient answer to her thunder, but if you will grant me permission (as one of the despised knitters) I should like to say something about our "over-dressed, pleasure-mad crowds." Personally, I think the average Australia is not of the earth, earthy. We should not judge by appearances. I say nothing of the dire necessity for England's united effort in her proximity to the seat of war, nor do I seek to belittle her noble women workers; I excuse no member of the over-dressed, pleasure-mad crowds "Englishwoman" holds up to contempt, but I ask her what about the gambling, pleasure-rioting, supper-drinking women we read of in English papers? Does she expect to find human nature different in the Antipodes? Not so, the skies only are changed. What she sees at Manly, at racecourses, at picture shows cannot be seen in England because they have not our sunshine—or should I say because they have more obscurity? They are cleverer in England. The over-dressed pleasure seekers—they have better opportunities for hiding their brilliance from those who disapprove—or shall I say they are less honest than our noisy Australians? God forbid that I, the nearest kin to an Anzac of the glorious 9th Battalion (Q.), should excuse wasters and shirkers. Their punishment is coming as sure as heaven is above. But let us be fair. All Australian women are not fatuous knitters, even when they are not riotous gamblers, surfers, theatre-goers; thousands are working for their soldiers. Do not judge them by the smiling faces you see in the street; you know the adage about an aching heart, "Englishwoman." do you not? Wait till you have been longer with us, we are not hard to understand, we are loyal and willing, only give us leaders and you will see what a "move on" there will be. That is our trouble. Who will lead?

I am, etc.,
A QUEENSLANDER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Does Mr. R. Walker class our King as an extremist? If not, why does he not loyally follow his example and advocate and practice prohibiton because it is necessary to do so to win the war.

I am, etc.,
F. H. MOLESWORTH.
President of the Health Society of New South Wales.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In your issue of the 3rd Mr. R. Walker feebly criticises Dr. Arthur's sensible suggestions as to the more effective "Winning the war." May I comment on one illustration of Mr. Walker's shallow reasoning? Mr. Walker says that during the strike there were many ships available, and Dr. Arthur might then have suggested that they should be filled with foodstuffs and sent to America for the Allies. Would Mr. Walker please tell your readers where the crews could have been obtained for these idle ships, which were idle because their crews were on strike, and no men could be obtained to take their place?

I am, etc. SHIPPER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Kindly allow me a few lines of space in your valuable paper in reply to "An Englishwoman," whose sensible letter appeared in to-day's "Herald." With sorrow I am forced to admit she is quite right in her remarks, and has summed up the average Australian correctly. Truly we are of the "Earth earthy," and our selfishness is on a level with our love for racing and surfing. I, for one, often feel truly ashamed of the little we are doing when such a lot of good, real work could be done. So far as money has been concerned it has been freely given. Give the Australian his due he is not mean; but we women could do such a lot of good work in this big land. Why don't we? Well, for two reasons—jealously and apathy. Knitting socks is all very well, but the utilising of this beautiful land for growing foodstuffs and heaps of things too numerous to mention for the benefit of those fighting for us would, I think, fill the bill, and be a great credit to our land; but the keynote to this beautiful country is "Apathy;" and I fear apathy is here to stop; it's in the Australian's blood. As I'm one of them I ought to know.

THE POLITICAL CRISIS.

Mr. Hughes in his report of the party meeting appears to distinguish between the documentary results which he is able to give to the public and the total result of the proceedings which will be considered by the Cabinet at its meeting this morning. The public will rather distinguish between the one resolution which prescribes the duty of the party to the people and the two which are mainly concerned with the personal question of leadership. Apparently the greater part of the discussion was the outcome of a fit of repentance which had overtaken a small section of the members. Having produced no rival to Mr. Hughes on Thursday night and having assented to his reinstatement they yesterday brought forward a candidate who could not be seriously considered. Such conduct will neither help the party to carry out the purposes for which it was elected nor strengthen its position in the country. The amendment which was accepted merely states in another form the position which was reached on Thursday night. It would have been easier for Mr. Hughes to carry out his pledge if some Nationalist from outside the Ministry had been chosen as leader. Since Mr. Hughes has been found by an almost unanimous vote to be indispensable the pledge remains, and the means of its fulfilment is one of the first subjects to be discussed by the Cabinet which gave it. The first step is for the Prime Minister to place his resignation in the hands of the Governor-General and to leave his Excellency to exercise his own discretion as he thinks fit in view of all the information at his disposal. In this respect nothing has changed since Mr. Hughes made his preliminary statement on Thursday. He then said that the question of a successor was for the Governor-General to decide, as it still is. The pledge that this Government would not carry on has not been made more binding by the party resolution. All that has happened is that the party has placed on record its own sense of the binding obligation of the pledge, and has declined to suggest any expedient by which it shall be carried out.

The first resolution of the meeting is a new statement of the fact that the party was elected to support a Win-the-War Government. If the form of the resolution is negative it has positive implications. It declares that at the present time the admission of the official Labour party to power would be contrary to the interests of the Empire and of the Allies. The leaders of the official Labour party have recently done their utmost to demonstrate the truth of these statements. They will not help Australia to do her best as far as she can without the compulsory powers which they have denied to the Government. They will encourage the enemy by dissociating themselves from the aims of Great Britain and of the Allies. They have proved by act and speech that the Commonwealth under their administration would be unable to carry out its duties to the dominions and to the Empire, or to its own people. Nothing could more clearly show the folly of making the position of a Government depend on the answer to a referendum than the claim of a small section of these expert politicians to represent the many hundreds of thousands who voted "No." The resolution not to allow Mr. Tudor to come into office, however, imposes very special obligations on the National party. Hitherto it has been fettered by a pledge which deprived Parliament of its necessary powers before it was elected. It now meets deprived of part of its own power of self-control by a pledge which binds not Parliament but the party. The position is very difficult, and has naturally aroused criticism of Mr. Hughes's leadership. It has been rendered more difficult by the failure of any of the critics to find any eligible successor. The two facts that remain unchallenged are that the government of the country must be carried on, and that Australia is bound by a pledge given neither by a politician nor a party that she will support her soldiers at the front and do her duty as a constituent part of the Empire. This National pledge must remain whatever solution, casuistical or otherwise, is given by the Cabinet to the perplexities of its own making. For this reason it is imperative that the crisis be settled without any further debate. The troubles before Australia are so serious and the prospects so uncertain that it is criminal neglect to spend any more time in deciding who shall administer the Government. Some changes in administration would be welcome. A new Minister for Defence might give new life to the department of which Senator Pearce has had unrelieved control since the beginning of the war. The urgent necessity is that after the waste of a month and more in fruitless wrangling, Parliament should occupy itself with practical measures and Ministers should seek to unite all classes of citizens in their support. Mr. Tudor's supporters have announced on his behalf that he will not join a National Government. Many of them would urge him to stand aside from any Government which favoured our continued participation in the war. But it is incredible that men who have the interests of Australia at heart who can see beyond their personal animosities and the immediate present should not unite to meet the national dangers, the dishonour implied in a failure to provide recruits, the stagnation of the shipping industry, the possibility that our wheat crop will be lost. Mr. Hughes appears to have placed these dangers clearly before the party. It is incumbent on his critics, whether Nationalists or members of the official Labour party, when they remind him of his pledge to show that they can find a substitute to carry on the Government, who, to his driving power and patriotism, can unite a better appreciation of the prejudices, the instincts, and the outlook of his fellow-citizens.

WHAT ORGANISATION MEANS.

Nothing in this war has been more remarkable than the organisation it has brought into being—not the organisation of this or that section of people, of this or that industry, but of whole nations. It is a tribute to the organising genius of their chief enemy that the Allies have been forced to realise that if they are to win this war it will only be by the most complete organisation of all their resources in men and material. The moral factor in war, as Napoleon said, may be as three to one compared with the material factor, but it cannot win wars by itself. There must be the material force behind it. The Allies have had much leeway to make up. Confronted with an enemy who had been secretly preparing for this day for forty years and more, and whose wonderful methods of organisation in science and industry, in finance and commerce, had excited the admiration of the world, it was no wonder that at the outset they found the strain almost beyond endurance. The wonder is, indeed, that they were able to endure it. It was the moral factor that told then. Superior in numbers, superior in artillery, superior in all the material concomitants of war, the German hosts were yet held up by the invincible spirit of a little nation that remains unconquered to this day, by the valour of the immortal soul of France, and by the iron nerve and determination of a comparative handful of British soldiers. And ever since then it has been a race for superiority in men and guns and shells, in ships, in aeroplanes, and all the new devices that have been born of this great war. It has meant the fighting of organisation by organisation, so that to-day we find Britain and France and Italy organised for war from top to bottom, with no section of society immune from its effects, its discomforts, and inconveniences; and across the Atlantic a new giant, caught in the vortex, is organising on a scale beyond our comprehension. When Sir Foster Fraser wrote his book "America at Work" we learnt something of the organising genius of that great nation; but to-day we see America at war—and at work as never before. Germany knows it, and fears it. Germany knows that if she cannot make a peace satisfactory to herself at this moment she must put all things to the test and seek a decision on the field of battle before the American armies and their thousands of guns and aeroplanes can be transported to France. Sometimes, if not always, the race goes to the swift, and Germany's only hope lies there. Time is the essence of the contract, and that is why to-day we find among both groups of belligerents the most feverish haste in their preparations for the final stage of the war. Mr. Goninan's account of what America is doing, published in yesterday's "Herald," leaves us in no doubt as to the intense earnestness and whole-souled co-operation of our new and greatest Ally. When we read, as we read in the cables to-day, that plans are to be considered for increasing to 5,000,000 the American troops to be transported to Europe in 1918-19 we can form some idea of the magnitude of America's war effort.

We cannot read of these figures, we cannot read of the continued preparations that are going on in all directions without realising their significance. Far from talking peace the Allies go on preparing for a long war, and it is time for us in Australia, after over three years, to follow the example of other countries and put away from us all things that interfere with the prosecution of our own part in the war. Australia has sent 300,000 men to the war—or, rather, she has equipped and transported 300,000 brave volunteers who saw their duty and did it; and in a few other directions, as, for example, in the metal industry, she has done something to rid us of the German incubus. Beyond this what has been done? We have talked about shipbuilding, we have talked about erecting grain silos and elevators, we have talked about this and that; we have talked, and talked, and talked, and done nothing. We have talked of organising the nation for war purposes. The Prime Minister has received deputations and talked to them, promising to do this thing and that thing. He has made no end of speeches, saying this would be done and that would be done. And what has been done? Australia at war has been a sorry spectacle. With a Government that takes things so easily is it to be wondered at that the people do nothing, that they live and move as if there were no war at all, and as if all they were expected to do was to eat, drink, and be merry? We perish under the everlasting deluge of talk. It is nearly too late, but not yet too late, to take a hand in doing things. Already it is apparent that if the National Government is to go on and to meet the country when the time comes, it must act and not drift in clouds of words. A host of things call for action. Recruitment must be put in hand by men who know how to approach the people. The shipbuilding programme must be grasped. The question of wheat and food for the Allies must be solved or we shall not be able to sell what we produce. Finance must be ordered and not left to drift. One-man government must go. Repatriation must awake from slumber. Defence needs reorganisation and vigilance. If Mr. Hughes, as he has been urged to do, would seek out some of Australia's most able business men and commission them to assist him in organising Australia's resources, particularly in the matter of shipping, he would do a real service. In Great Britain Mr. Lloyd George has not hesitated to do this. Wherever the most able men were to be found he has sought them out and placed them in executive positions of the highest responsibility. He has taken private citizens of proved business capacity and made Ministers of State of them, careless of all precedent, and the British War Cabinet to-day includes men who but a little while ago never had a thought of entering politics. These men are glad to be of service to their country. And we see the same thing happening in America. Many of America's greatest men of business—bankers, shipping experts, engineers, inventors, and others—are to-day controlling great departments of State which the war has created. Public opinion has forced these things in Britain and America, and public opinion in Australia is waxing stronger in the same direction. People are inclined to forget, as General Smuts remarked in his great speech in London on May 15 last, that the world is getting more democratic, and that forces which find expression in public opinion are going to be far more powerful in the future than they have been in the past. It is a fact that politicians, in particular, are inclined to forget.

DOCTORS AND WAR.

AUSTRALIAN ORGANISATION URGED.

The "Medical Journal of Australia," in the issue that will be published to-day, discusses the relation of the profession to the war. Setting aside considerations which the editor says "lie outside the province of a medical journal," to-day's issue will say:—

"It is a prime duty of the medical profession in Australia to press for its mobilisation, so that the difficulties of the future may be anticipated and nothing may be left to chance. Since we have the assurance of an overwhelming number of medical practitioners that they are prepared to do all that lies in their power to help the Empire in its hour of trial, it is essential that adequate steps shall be taken to ensure that the knowledge laboriously collected by scientists throughout the world shall be available for our soldiers. In the past our soldiers have suffered from the lack of skilled orthopaedic treatment from the moment it is required until their discharge. Better results would have been achieved had there been a neurological service, under the direction of one of our leading neurologists. The absence of a properly equipped bacteriological laboratory with each division, under the care of a trained bacteriologist, has been responsible for much wrong diagnosis and consequent wastage of fighting strength. The function of the medical profession in war is not limited to surgery; there is much to be done in other directions. But unless each special branch of medicine is entrusted to a competent expert, and unless the work is developed along recognised lines, good results cannot be secured. It is immaterial whether the organisation is undertaken in Australia or in the several theatres of the war, provided that the necessary co-ordination exists between those in authority at home and those in authority abroad. The defects of the past have been due to a combination of difficulties and unforeseen circumstances. The experience of three and a half years of war suffices to teach us how these manifold difficulties can be overcome and what the problems of the coming year are to be. The aim of the Australian Army Medical Service must be to be entirely self-contained, efficient, and complete. With judicious selection of medical officers for the many positions to be filled, this aim should be attainable. There should still be sufficient medical knowledge and surgical skill left in Australia to serve the requirements of the civil population."

HUGE MEMBERSHIP.

As a result of what is aggressively termed "the Christmas drive for membership," some 16,000,000 new members have been enrolled in the American National Red Cross, making a total membership of approximately 22,000,000. A cablegram to this effect has been received by the Consul-General for America (Mr. J. I. Brittain), from Mr. H. W. Davison, chairman of the American Red Cross War Council at Washington. Mr. Davison adds:—"This gives evidence of the united spirit of the American people in their purpose to provide for and protect our boys, and lend succour and aid to the soldiers and civilian population of our Allies. Certainly, this information should assure your public that American people are conscious of the sacrifice which their Allies have suffered, and purpose to do everything within their power, not only to protect their own, but to aid and protect their comrades in the war."

"LONELY SOLDIERS."

NO MORE LETTERS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Minister for Defence, Senator Pearce, stated to-day that as a result of insertion in the Australian Press of advertisements of "lonely soldiers" inviting correspondence from residents in Australia, several bags of letters, papers, and parcels were received by members of the Australian Imperial Force, two advertisements alone resulting in the arrival of some 10,000 letters for two men. The Minister further stated that the practice of inserting advertisements in the Press inviting the correspondence of strangers is strictly forbidden by the Censorship regulations, and is an abuse of the facilities granted. It also causes congestion in the post-office to the detriment and delay of ordinary correspondence, to say nothing of additional work thrown on the Base Censors. In future advertisements in the Press by "lonely soldiers" will be prohibited, and correspondence under the same class stopped.

CITY RAILWAY.

Several months ago, owing to financial stringency, the State Government decided not to proceed with the construction of the city railway.

Yesterday's "Government Gazette" contains a notification of the rescission of resumption of land under the City and Suburban Railways (Resumption Rescission) Act.

WAR TIME IN LONDON

(BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

Peace Where There is No Peace.

LONDON, Nov. 12.

The Pacificists in the House of Commons brought up, a few days ago, one of their periodical motions urging the desirableness of peace negotiations. In view of the present state of the war this was a more than usually absurd attempt. But it had valuable result, in that it gave opportunity for a reply from Mr. Balfour, which was not only full of splendid dash and vim, but was also an utterly crushing attack of this fatuous little minority of extremists. Mr. Balfour was, indeed, in great cue, and without once descending from the level of outlook which distinguishes him, and in words that often glowed with a rare warmth of eloquence, he spoke the real mind of this country with impressive effect. First disposing of Mr. Ramsay MacDonald in a brilliant little piece of dialectic as to that gentleman's view of the means necessary to achieve a world-democracy, he passed on to uproot a Pacificist mare's nest as to the existence of a secret treaty between France and Britain for the confiscation of tracts of Germany, and then in his characteristic way lifted the debate into regions far beyond the limited horizon of the Pacificists. The speech deserves reading wherever resolute expression of our war aims is valued—as the following extracts may serve to show. As to the chances of an effective peace by premature negotiation, the Foreign Secretary said:—"It is not Europe alone that we have to consider . . . . Have the hon. gentlemen no interest in those elements in the Turkish Empire, for example, which have suffered and are suffering not merely under misgovernment, but under the most brutal and barbarous tyranny? Is Armenia nothing? Is Arabia nothing? They talk of democratisation. Democratisation is invaluable when applied to States in a certain degree of advancement. It is the one security, as I think, of good government and progress. But it is not applicable to every form of human community, and at all events you cannot democratise Turkey. Turkey has come into the war. Is it to be a matter of indifference to us that Armenia should be put back under Turkish rule? . . . . The hon. gentleman has framed his resolution. Has he no views about Poland? He thinks that the whole question of Poland can be settled in existing circumstances if you only bring European Powers together round the table. Is that common sense? . . . . The hon. gentleman apparently thinks that a free Poland can be created by negotiation. Does he seriously think Germany is in a mood to do that? Let him look at the German newspapers." And as to the steadfastness of the Allied war aims, Mr. Balfour declared that they had never changed since they were first enunciated by Mr. Asquith. "There has been no change," he said, in a fine passage, "and the last objection to be applied to them is the one which has been borrowed by the hon. gentleman from ill-informed persons in another country, who describe the war aims of the Allies as imperialistic. What is there imperialistic in desiring to see an independent Poland? What is there imperialistic in wishing to see Armenia freed from Turkey, or Alsace-Lorraine restored to France? What is there imperialistic in saying that Italy should have the restoration of her own soil, should embrace those of her own race, of her own tongue, and of her own civilisation? What is there imperialistic in deciding that the Roumanians shall be under the Roumanian flag? What is there imperialistic in desiring to see the Servian community again a great and flourishing and a united Power? There is nothing imperialistic in these aims—(cheers)—and for the hon. gentlemen to come down to the House and misrepresent them—in the British House of Commons—knowing that their misrepresentations will receive currency amongst our enemies—(loud cheers)—seems to me to be one of the greatest disservices which any man can render to his cause. (Cheers.)" And, arguing at length as to the futility of attempting to arbitrate on the issues of the war, Mr. Balfour asked if anyone can believe that Europe may, at the present time, hope for security by negotiation with the enemy. "Is there," he said, "a single contract of any kind, however solemn it may be, however closely it may harmonise with the natural morality of mankind, and with the instincts of humanity, which civilisation is supposed, more or less erroneously, to foster—is there a single one of those engagements, however entered into, which Germany has not broken at once and without hesitation when it suited her?" And finally:—"The hon. gentleman talks of liberty and democratisation and the rights of nationalities. These are our objects. We have proclaimed them. Have our enemies ever proclaimed them? Have they ever done anything to promote them? . . . . The destruction of human life and the accumulation of human suffering caused by this war cannot be exaggerated. No rhetoric, however eloquent, will rise to the full height of describing what that destruction and that misery has been, and is, and at the moment is likely to be. But the fact that it has been borne by the freedom-loving nations is in itself surely a conclusive argument against the waste of this suffering by consenting to give up the ideals for which the suffering has been borne. . . . . I shall certainly go into the lobby, and I hope that every member, irrespective of party division, will go into the lobby to show clearly what we think, and why we think it, and what are the ends at which we are aiming—to proclaim at large that, great as are the sacrifices we have already made, we are ready to continue them, and continue them indefinitely, until the great and righteous and unselfish objects we have in view are finally secured." (Loud cheers.) The closure was moved and carried by such a majority that the Pacificists did not press their motion to a division.

Two Big Problems.

The enemy's still unchecked invasion of Italy and the very probable prolonging of the war which it suggests have emphasised the importance of our two most pressing domestic problems—that of food and that of man-power. Sir Arthur Yapp has issued this week his suggestions to the community for a voluntary rationing of themselves with a view to save tonnage and to eke out home supplies. The scheme allows children freedom to eat as they will, and it suggests a basis of meat and bread regulation by adults. To the manual worker, for example, if he is engaged in heavy work, is allotted 8lb of bread weekly, to ordinary manual workers 7lb, and to sedentary workers 6½lb, while women are similarly adjudged to be entitled to 5lb, 4½lb, and 3lb respectively. Only the bread allowance is so graded, and as to the other food we are instructed that we should eat no more than 2lb of meat weekly, 12oz of cereals, other than bread, 10oz of butter, margarine, lard, oils, and fats, and 8oz of sugar. Sir Arthur Yapp advises us that the rations have been scientifically determined as sufficient for health, and they are the most that can be allowed in the present stringency. As to man-power, Sir Auckland Geddes has announced that a vigorous combing-out of eligible men is about to take place, that he does not believe in the cry of young men first and single men next, but intends to proceed strictly on the lines of important or less important occupation, and that a real and universal national service cannot any longer be delayed. Thus does the grip of war harden upon this country, however it may be in favoured far-off lands elsewhere.

SOUTH COAST COLLIERIES.

BULLI, Friday.

A decided advantage has been conferred during the past few days to the miners who are employed at the South Bulli Colliery, which is the largest on the South Coast. The management now convey the men into the workings by a train, worked by electricity, which travels at the rate of about six miles an hour. This has the advantage of enabling the miners to have about an extra half hour to cut the coal. There is every probability of this system being extended to other district collieries.

THE GERMAN TERMS

TROTSKY'S REPLY

RUSSIA WILL NOT CONSENT

LONDON, Jan. 3.

A message from Petrograd says M. Trotsky (Foreign Minister) announces that Russia will not consent to Germany's terms of peace.

The Russian delegates in their declaration at Brest Litovsk, in reply to the contention of the Germans that Poland, Lithuania, and Courland had already expressed their will as to whether they would remain under the German flag, declared that the Russian Government would not accept such contention, which would be a step backward.

The declaration continued: "The German Government knows that the so-called expression is only from a group of new citizens and owners of estates in the occupied districts. The people themselves had no say under a state of siege and under the command of the German generals. It is ridiculous to call that a free expression of the people's will. Germany agrees to evacuate part of the occupied Russian districts, but refuses to evacuate Poland and Lithuania. The Russian revolution will never accept this condition, gentlemen. We say to the Imperialists of Germany, Austria, France, and Britain, the time has come for the people to have the right of free action. The people will give no respite. There is no time for playing with words. The Russian revolution will not deliver itself to one gang of capitalists or another. We shall continue our way, never mind what happens."

The "New York World's" Petrograd correspondent says that persistent reports of the Germans massing troops opposite Dvinsk angered the Bolsheviks, and was one of the causes of the interruption to the negotiations.

GERMANS MAY BACK DOWN.

The German Emperor, Hindenburg, and Count Hertling have agreed to immediate fresh instructions for the negotiations at Brest Litovsk.

An Amsterdam report says the Chancellor (Count Hertling) has agreed that the Reichstag shall discuss in secret session Herr Haase's interpellation on the Brest-Litovsk terms.

CRISIS IN GERMANY.

A Copenhagen report says messages from Germany indicate that an internal crisis resulted from the rupture of the Brest-Litovsk negotiations. The Emperor hastily summoned a Crown Council at Bellevue Castle on Wednesday, Hindenburg and Ludendorff participating in the discussion on peace negotiations. Meanwhile there was a stormy meeting between Herr Kuhlmann and the party leaders, which lasted seven hours. The leaders criticised Herr Kuhlmann's policy. Herr Scheidemann, representing the Socialists, and Herr Haase, representing the Independent Socialists, demanded that the Reichstag should meet at the earliest possible date to enable the people to control the peace negotiations.

It is anticipated that to-day's meeting of the Reichstag's main committee will lead to the summoning of the Reichstag.

The Amsterdam correspondent of the "Chicago Daily News" says that, while the peace elements in Germany violently oppose severing territory from Russia, Hindenburg and Ludendorff uncompromisingly support such severance. The crisis is most acute.

The Leipzig "Volks Zeitung" accuses Herr Kuhlmann (German Foreign Minister) of lying and fraud. "Everyone in Germany, Russia, and the Allied countries," it says, "now knows that Germany is not aiming to secure a just peace, such as Kuhlmann depicted on December 25, but an enormous increase of Germany's power, which will strengthen the war will of the Allies."

PRISONERS OF WAR.

The Leninites organised a meeting of prisoners of war, in order to foster revolutionary propaganda, with comic results. Eight hundred prisoners assembled in an evil smelling circus in Petrograd and were addressed in eight languages. The Germans maintained a stolid silence until the chairman asked some German prisoners to address the meeting. An individual rose up and said: "It is time for deeds, not words," and sat down.

Others then complained of ill-treatment, one saying that he had to apply for special leave if he wished to stay out in the evening. The chairman promptly closed the meeting.

RUSSIAN DISASTER.

TROOP TRAINS BLOWN UP.

A Haparanda telegram reports that a horrible disaster occurred on Christmas Eve, when an explosion at a Russian station destroyed two trains crowded with Cossacks.

Two thousand were killed, and buildings within two kilometres were wrecked. An entire munition depot on the south-western front was blown up.

BRITISH AIR COUNCIL.

It is announced officially that the Air Council, established on January 3, includes Baron Rothermere, younger brother of Lord Northcliffe, as president; Major-General Hugh Montagu Trenchard, C.B. (commandant of the Central Flying School), Chief of the Air Staff; Rear-Admiral Mark Kerr, C.B., deputy chief of air staff; and Sir William Weir (Controller of aeronautical supplies), Director-General of Aircraft Production.

HUNGARIAN WAR LOAN.

An Amsterdam report says subscriptions to Hungary's seventh war loan were three thousand million kroner. The Government confidently expected eight thousand million. The banks were the chief subscribers, the public subscriptions being insignificant.

CARE OF SOLDIERS.

Y.M.C.A. officials in London declare that Mr. Jamieson's speech at Christchurch, in which he stated that nothing was done for the New Zealanders, is absolutely incorrect. They point out that the men are met at stations and taken to Shakespeare hut, near the British Museum, where 320 beds are provided. A programme of sight-seeing and entertainment is arranged, and meals are supplied, covering the whole period of leave. The London hostels accommodated 15,500 soldiers from all parts of the Empire last week. The same system exists in the provinces. Mr. Jamieson, it is pointed out, must not expect the greatest city in the world to be like a New Zealand glade under tree ferns.

Sir Arthur Yapp, Director of Food Economy, states that Mr. Jamieson's statement is absolutely false, and a gross misrepresentation of facts.

Sir Richard Henry, Commissioner of Police, in the course of a speech said Mr. Jamieson's statement was a gross exaggeration, and failed to place the blame on the right shoulders.

LENIN'S GOVERNMENT.

BRITAIN MAY RECOGNISE.

LONDON, Jan. 4.

The "Daily Chronicle" states that Britain shortly will recognise the Lenin Government.

ASIATIC RUSSIA.

ACTION BY ALLIES.

A telegram from Paris states that the French Cabinet Council has discussed the murder of three Frenchmen in Irkutsk, including the Consul.

Allied action in Siberia is possible with the assistance of Japan, which has been facilitated through the co-operation of America. Japan and the Allies are likely to forestall German interference in Siberia.

News of the withdrawal of all British ships from Archangel, and the breaking up of the British and French depots has created a sensation in Russia.

A Petrograd report says Sir George Buchanan (British Ambassador) and members of the British War Mission to Russia are returning to London.

SWEDEN AND BOLSHEVIKS.

A message from Zurich says that the Berlin "Morgen Post" states that the Swedish Government, replying to the Bolsheviks' recent request for the Brest-Litovsk Conference to be transferred to Stockholm, raised various objections, including the food shortage, and possible confusion with the impending Socialists' Peace Conference.

MARTIAL LAW IN MOSCOW.

Advices received in Washington state that martial law has been declared in Moscow.

The Bolsheviks have seized the banks and factories.

BOLSHEVIK AMBASSADOR.

The Russian Embassy in London refuses to recognise citizen Litmloff, who was appointed by Trotsky Provisional Plenipotentiary. The officials decline to hand over the money and documents in the Embassy's possession.

TROOPS FOR FINLAND.

A Copenhagen report says the Red Guard is being mobilised at Petrograd, and ordered to proceed to Finland, whither 5000 already have been sent.

U-BOATS' TOLL.

ITALIAN SHIPPING.

The Italian official figures are:—Sinkings, one steamer over 1500 tons, one sailing vessel under 100 tons. Two vessels were unsuccessfully attacked.

LOSS OF THE ANTILLES.

The Court of Inquiry has found that the United States transport Antilles, 6878 tons, was sunk owing to lack of proper escort.

The Antilles was torpedoed in October last, while homeward bound.

AMERICA'S EFFORTS.

HUGE ARMY CONTEMPLATED.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.

The Washington correspondent of the "New York Times" says that a maximum of tonnage for transporting troops to Europe will be obtained by restricting non-essential oversea trade.

Plans are being considered for increasing the number of troops to be sent to Europe in 1918 and 1919 to 5,000,000.

General Crowder has recommended the registration of men who have attained the age of 21 since the first draft was made, thus adding 700,000 drafters annually.

Mr. Baker (Secretary for War) announces that five branches of the Ordnance Department had been co-ordinated under a single head, assisted by business men. He expects this will result in a tremendous shooting up in the output of munitions.

ENGLAND'S FOOD.

COMPULSORY RATIONING.

LONDON, Jan. 4.

Lord Rhondda (Food Controller), in opening a communal kitchen at Silvertown, expressed disappointment at the slowness of development of the kitchen scheme designed to economise food and provide meals for all classes. His wife, he said, had had a meal at Westminster kitchen. Her only complaint was that she got too much for her money. Lord Rhondda said he was prepared to give food committees drastic powers. He was on the side of the poor consumer. There would inevitably be shortages of certain foods, but there was nothing alarming in the situation. It was only necessary to tighten belts. Our privations were as nothing compared with Germany's.

He was afraid Britain would have to adopt compulsory rationing, and had nearly completed a scheme which would be put into operation after Cabinet had given its sanction.

The production of British margarine had enormously increased. He hoped there would be a big supply of butter and margarine in six months' time. It was hoped further to reduce the price of tea. Lord Rhondda appealed for patience regarding meat, of which there would be a great shortage for the next fortnight, but after that it would improve. The increased cost of essential foodstuffs was under 60 per cent., and had decreased 10 per cent. in the past six months.

Mr. Will Thorne, M.P., who presided, said that many, including poor people, boasted of the supplies of tea and margarine they had purchased. "I was amazed to see that Miss Marie Corelli was pinched after the attitude she had taken up during the war," he said.

GENERAL FREYBURG, V.C.

King George at Buckingham Palace decorated Brigadier-General Bernard Cecil Freyberg, of New Zealand, with the Victoria Cross.

SPANISH PARLIAMENT.

GENERAL CABLES.

Sir Edward Morris (Premier of Newfoundland) has resigned. Mr. William F. Lloyd is the new premier. Sir Edward Morris is likely to be the new commissioner in London.

Advices from Washington state that M. Jusserand (French Ambassador to the United States) may shortly return to France, and that M. Tardieu will replace him.

The Washington correspondent of the United Press Association says it is understood that Lord Reading will succeed Sir Cecil Spring Rice as British Ambassador to the United States.

Mr. Andrew Fisher (Australian High Commissioner) on Saturday will open an exhibition at the Leicester Galleries of 65 of Mr. Will Dyson's pictures, including the depicting of an episode on the West front, in which the Australians played a prominent part. Many pictures are characterised by strong drawing. The collection ultimately will be sent to Australia.

WESTERN FRONT.

OFFICIAL REPORTS.

LONDON, Jan. 3.

Sir Douglas Haig reporting at noon on Thursday stated: We repulsed night raiders in the neighbourhood of La Bassee, and secured some prisoners.

A French communique states: There is considerable artillery activity in the sectors of Beaumont and Caurieres Wood.

ACROSS THE PIAVE.

ANGLO-ITALIAN RAIDS.

LONDON, Jan. 3.

A British-Italian official report on Thursday stated: Our artillery carried out destructive bombardments of enemy batteries. Our airmen carried out successful bombing raids. We raided across the Piave, taking prisoners.

An Italian official message on Thursday stated: The enemy bombed two hospitals in Castelfranco and Veneto, and killed 18 patients.

SHIPS AND MAN-POWER.

STRAIN UPON BRITAIN.

It is officially reported that Mr. Barnes (Labour member of the War Cabinet) presided at a meeting of representatives of the Government and Trade Unions associated with recruiting in connection with protected occupations. Sir Auckland Geddes (Minister for National Service) stated that the War Cabinet had studied the man-power resources of all belligerents. The Russian situation had completely altered the position in the last six months, but the American armies ultimately would more than redress the balance.

The speed with which they could be put in the field was almost entirely a question of tonnage. Meanwhile, a great strain would be thrown on Britain's resources. Three prerequisites to victory were an increase in the output of shipping, a saving of tonnage, and the maintenance of the armies in the field; hence the departure from existing arrangements was imperative.

The meeting was adjourned until next day.

Chaplain McClean.

MILITARIST CREED.

TWO GERMAN WAR BOOKS.

Two books are being widely circulated officially in Germany, the exportation of which is strictly prevented. One urges secondary marriages, and the other is General Freytag Loringhoven's "War Deductions." The latter has an enormous circulation. It booms the Junkers' and Militarists' demands, that Germany must for all time maintain world power by future victories. It asserts all the old aspirations, palliates the German brutalities, scorns a league of nations as Utopian, and holds that only armaments are a guarantee of peace. Freytag von Loringhoven is Deputy Chief of the German Staff.

POST-WAR PROBLEMS.

LABOUR'S IDEALS.

The Labour Conference's reconstruction report includes a minimum wage of 30/ and a forty-eight hours working week, a capital levy to pay off the National Debt, an outlay of £300,000,300 upon the erection of 1,000,000 new cottages, half of trade union out-of-work benefits to be paid by the State, the progressive elimination of private capital, the State to be heir to all private riches except quite a moderate amount for a family, no protective tariff, and Home Rule throughout the Empire.

INTER-ALLIED FINANCE.

A Paris report says:—Mr. Bonar Law, Mr. Austen Chamberlain, Lord Buckmaster (Britain), M. Klotz, and Signor Nitti (French and Italian Ministers of Finance), and Mr. Oscar Crosby (representing America) are deliberating regarding inter-allied war purchases and finance.

LUXBURG INSANE.

A message from Buenos Ayres states that the medical authorities have reported that Count von Luxburg, German Charge d'Affaires in the Argentine, whose secret messages urging that neutral ships should be sunk without leaving a trace created much indignation when revealed, has been eccentric for a decade, and that he is now insane.

LATE WAR NEWS.

BREST-LITOVSK FAILURE

GERMAN TERMS IMPOSSIBLE.

LONDON, Jan. 4.

The "Daily Chronicle's" Petrograd correspondent says one Bolshevik organ, the "Isvestia," has ceased its diatribes against England, the Cadets, and the Social Revolutionaries, and now bitterly attacks the German Imperialists, condemning German oppression of the working classes in Poland, Lithuania, and Courland. It declares that Russia must repudiate Germany's terms.

The Bolsheviks express surprise and indignation that Germany, while admitting the principle of no annexations, refuses to withdraw troops from occupied territories, declaring that the latter already have asserted their independence. The Bolsheviks withheld the terms for a week, until it was impossible longer to conceal them.

They now admit that the Brest-Litovsk negotiations were a failure. The German terms are impossible as a basis for peace.

At a meeting of the Soviet last night, M. Kameneff announced that the terms were unacceptable, whereupon the representatives of one army after another declared that the soldiers would not, and could not, fight. Russia, therefore, unless a miracle happens, stands faced with the certainty of a humiliating separate peace, dictated by the Germans. The Bolsheviks still try to evade the issue. They promise a revolution in Poland, and hint at the possibility of a revolution in Germany. They print revolutionary leaflets in German and Magyar, which are confiscated immediately on their arrival in the enemy lines. The leaflets promise the people of the Central Powers the mighty aid of the Russian revolutionary proletariat.

Owing to the breakdown of the Brest-Litovsk negotiations, the "Daily Chronicle" continues, the Allies are likely to recognise the Lenin Government. A diplomat in sympathy with the ideas of revolutionary Russia will be sent to Petrograd to replace Sir George Buchanan. It is expected Citizen Litvinoff, who has been appointed Provisional Plenipotentiary in London, will be recognised, and allowed to occupy the Russian Embassy. A statement of the Allied policy will shortly be sent to Russia, which will be democratic in character.

The "Daily Chronicle" interviewed Litvinoff, who is a man of short, thickset, bulky figure. He is keenly intelligent, pugnacious, and has a perfect knowledge of English. He worked as a journalist in London. He said, "As ambassador, I shall dissipate the misunderstanding and misrepresentation of the motives, character, and purpose of the Soviet Government. It is untrue the Bolsheviks grabbed power. They only intervened in November to take the reins from Kerensky's trembling hands, in order to give them to the Soviets. Unfortunately, the moderate Socialists, representing the petite bourgeois and well-to-do peasantry, chose to desert the Soviet's leaders. The moderates should have seen that the crushing of the Soviets meant the downfall of the revolution. They were mere tools in the hands of the grande bourgeois generals and reactionaries, who were frightened of the Soviets' social reforms. The crucial fact is that in Russia at present there is a class war raging in a naked form in Great Russia, Ukraine, Finland, and Siberia, and even among the Cossacks. The Bolsheviks have behind them the whole of the industrial working class and the great mass of the peasantry, and it is grossly mischievous to represent the Bolsheviks as pro-German, anti-Ally, or mere pacificists."

"The Bolsheviks," Litvinoff went on to say, "realise clearly that Kaiserism and Junkerdom are the greatest obstacles to peace. They are opposed to replacing Prussian militarism by Russian, French, or English militarism. I am sanguine enough to imagine that the Russian and German armies on the Eastern front may some day march together against the common foes of the world's proletariat in Germany, and perhaps in other countries, too. The Bolsheviks look upon a separate peace as a disaster, but present conditions make it inevitable, and the democracies of the Allied countries must see that a calamity does not happen. They must act at once, otherwise it will be too late."

The Germans at their conferences in Petrograd seem to assume that they have only to arrange the technical details of a peace treaty. They insist upon the immediate establishment of railway and commercial intercourse, and the exchange of war prisoners. The Russians strongly objected, pointing out that hitherto they only agreed to discuss technicalities relating to the armistice. They declared that war prisoners would not be released until the conclusion of a general peace.

The newspaper "Novaya Zhizn" insists that the only way out of the impasse is the summoning of the Constituent Assembly.

The return of Baron Kuehlmann (German Foreign Minister) to Brest-Litovsk is interpreted to mean that Germany is weakening in regard to the annexation of Poland, Courland, and Lithuania.

The Berlin correspondent of the "Frankfurter Zeitung" says the Crown Council subjected the results of the Brest-Litovsk negotiations to severe criticism, whereupon new lines for the attitude of the German negotiators were settled by the German Emperor, Marshal von Hindenburg, and Dr. Hertling.

A Paris message says that the Radical Republicans and Socialists have sent a stirring manifesto to Russian Republicans, refusing to believe that they will abandon themselves to the dictates of Prussian militarism, or forget ancient friendships. "The actions of M. Lenin and M. Trotsky sadden us," the manifesto says, "but the work for public safety, though hindered by treason, will be continued by the French soldiers and the Allies."

The "Daily Mail's" Petrograd correspondent was present at the Smolny Institute on Wednesday to hear M. Kampeff. The great hall was crowded. Few knew that the negotiations had already been stopped. M. Kampeff read reports showing that the Germans had tried to bind Russia to herself by a renewal of the 1904 treaty, of which the Czar's refusal to renew was one of the causes of the war. Germany put forward several alternative proposals with the object of securing for herself the position of the most favoured nation. The Russians replied that they favoured equality of trade, and could not, while socialising industry and nationalising banks, subscribe to principles contrary to socialism. The Germans then seem to have climbed down. Germany disclosed her intention, under the pretext of self-definition, to retain Poland and Lithuania.

Herr Hoffman represented the annexationists, but Baron Kuhlmann and Count Czernin were more moderate. Their frequent disputes during the negotiations were referred to Berlin, which, without exception, supported Baron Kuhlmann and Count Czernin. The Russian delegates believe that Germany will yield regarding Poland and Lithuania.

M. Kameneff said: "If Germany now moves troops against revolutionary Russia, with the evident purpose of securing the final enslavement of Poland and Lithuania, this will instantly cause an explosion which will destroy German imperialism."

The soldier delegates then described the appalling condition of the army, but affirmed it would continue the war under the most desperate conditions unless the Germans agree to a democratic peace.

A resolution was carried denouncing the forcing of the will of strangers upon the people of Poland, Lithuania, and Courland, and appealing to the people of the Central Powers to use pressure on their Governments to ensure that the policy of no annexations and no indemnities should be actual.

An Amsterdam message says that Count Czernin and his staff, and Talaat Pasha were going to Brest-Litovsk on Friday.

GERMAN COLONIES.

The British Workers' League held a meeting at Caxton Hall yesterday. Lord Sydenham, in a letter regretting his inability to attend, wrote expressing complete accordance with the league's views. It was unthinkable, he said, that the African colonies should be handed back to the tender mercies of the most barbarous nation in the world. He hoped stress would be laid on the fact that the question did not concern our people alone, but that South Africa and Australia must have a powerful voice in deciding it. Therefore, it would be futile for the British official Labour party to dispose of the question of these colonies without consulting with the dominions.

WESTERN FRONT.

Sir Douglas Haig's midnight report on Thursday says:—

Raiders were driven off before reaching our positions eastward of Epehy. Hostile artillery is very active south-westward and westward of Cambrai, and is also active along the front southward of Lens to Armentieres, and in the neighbourhood of Zonnebeke. Our aeroplanes last night dropped a few bombs on Carvin, despite bad weather.

In a later report, Sir Douglas Haig says: Local fighting yesterday afternoon on the Cambrai front, near the Canal Du Nord, produced no material change. We advanced our line slightly at night, southward of Lens. There has been hostile artillery fire at Bullecourt and Ypres.

The inquiry into the Cambrai reverse has been completed. Several officers have been retired from responsible positions.

MONTE TOMBA.

DASHING FRENCH ATTACK.

Mr. Julius Price describes the French success at Monte Tomba. In the shallow valley between the French and Austrian lines at Monte Tomba the Austrians brought up a picked division, expecting an onslaught. After several hours' bombardment the French, with loud hurrahs, scrambled over the parapet. They charged down the snow-clad slope with the impetuous ardour of a crowd of schoolboys about to engage in a snowball fight. The Austrians immediately opened a tremendous barrage against the figures silhouetted against the snowy background. The Frenchmen, with their downhill impetus, carried on up the slope, and in the hand-to-hand fighting that ensued along the whole line the issue was never in doubt.

DAY OF PRAYER.

Licensed premises in the United Kingdom are closing on Sunday, the national day of prayer.

MEAT SHORTAGE.

Butchers stood in long queues at Smithfield Market before daylight. Wholesale butchers were without mutton. It is stated the Government is releasing 2000 carcases of frozen mutton to-morrow (Friday).

PETROFF'S RELEASE.

Tchicherin Petroff, whose release M. Trotsky demanded, left St. Pancras, en route for Russia, last night. He is a man of education, and belong to a family of wealthy landowners. He was once first secretary of the Russian Embassy in Berlin, but resigned, owing to his Tolstoyan opinions. After leaving Brixton prison, Petroff had a long interview with Mr. Henderson, who explained the views of the Labour party. There was a demonstration as the train steamed out, the Russian "Internationale" being sung.

SHORTAGE OF FOOD.

Mr. Lloyd George appeals to agricultural labourers to do their utmost to grow more food. He says the world-wide shortage may compel us to feed the army and navy ourselves on home-grown food. Every idle day lengthens the war and lessens the chance of victory. He urges an extra one hour's work daily.

AIRMEN INTERNED.

An Amsterdam message says that a British biplane landed at Biervliet, Holland, near the Belgian frontier. The three occupants were interned. The pilot, whose hands and legs were frozen, was unable to control his machine.

WOUNDED PRISONERS.

The Amsterdam "Telegraaf" says that a representative of the British War Office has protested to the Dutch Government against the inadequate arrangements for the transference of wounded prisoners from the ambulance train to the Red Cross steamer at Rotterdam. Owing to the delay in the arrival of the train, the transfer occurred at dark. Moreover, the tide had lifted the ship, thus increasing the gradient of the gangways. The number of stretchers was insufficient. The Dutch superintendent of wounded prisoners is addressing a protest to Germany.

KING OF SPAIN'S PALACE BURNT.

MADRID, Jan. 3.

King Alfonso's palace at La Granja has been totally burned. It was the most beautiful palace in Spain. It was built by Phillip V. on the Versailles model.

DR. STEFANSSON'S RETURN.

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.

The report that Dr. Stefansson has reached Fort Yukon is incorrect. The Marine Department understands he is still aboard his ship at Herschell Island, and probably intends to travel overland to Fort Macpherson to meet the Royal North-west Mounted Police Patrol from Dawson.

The results of his discoveries are not expected until the summer.

MEXICAN MASSACRE.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 3.

A train was held up at Pitahaya, and 107 people were massacred.

COUSINS DECORATED.

Mrs. S. Brown, of 76 Upper Fort-street, Sydney, has been notified that her son, Private A. L. Brown, has been awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal for acts of gallantry and devotion to duty in the field, officially described as follows:—"He, single-handed, continued to fire his machine-gun, and eventually succeeded in putting an enemy gun out of action. He set a splendid example of courage and determination."

Corporal C. V. R. Bush, who was recently killed in action, and who was a nephew of Mrs. Brown, has been awarded the Military Medal for bravery in the field.

WAR NOTES.

ALLIED ASSISTANCE TO RUSSIA.

If we can rely upon the accuracy of the statements contained in it, the Petrograd message announcing that the British ships in Archangel are being withdrawn and the British and French depots broken up is a clear indication that the Allies are abandoning hope of Russia's recovery. Archangel on the White Sea, and Vladivostock in the East, were practically the only two ports by way of which assistance from her western Allies and from the outside world could be despatched to Russia. They have accordingly witnessed a period of remarkable activity during the war, and have both been in a state of almost continual congestion owing to the fleets of vessels which have been pouring out cargoes of munitions and supplies on to the wharfs, and at times even on to the ice, which interferes with traffic in both ports during the winter. While every available building and vacant square in Vladivostock has at times been crowded with war supplies of all kinds from America and Japan, Archangel has been an equally busy receiving centre for supplies from Great Britain and the other Entente Allies. The material which has passed through these two ports since the outbreak of war undoubtedly saved Russia from suffering greater reverses than those which she has already sustained, and even made possible the successful offensive conducted by General Brusiloff in June, 1916. Vast quantities of material, which were despatched to Russia for the proposed 1917 campaign, however, have undoubtedly been wasted and could well have been utilised to better advantage elsewhere. Russia always had the men and her main requirement was material. The Allies seriously endeavoured to meet that requirement, and they were, no doubt, just beginning to grapple effectively with the huge problem which Russia's needs presented when Russia began to lose her main asset by the complete collapse of the moral and discipline of the vast armies which were to make effective use of the material placed at her disposal. The developments at the peace discussion at Brest Litovsk occasionally gave rise to the hope that Russia may yet decline to accept a separate peace on the terms proposed by Germany, and that revolutionary Russia might remain an enemy of the Cenral Powers. Even if the present negotiations end in failure, however, Russia's future part in the war is not likely to prove very effective. Her military forces cannot, without something in the nature of a miracle occurring, be restored to their previous standard of efficiency in time to permit of her achieving any important results for many months to come. She must, therefore, be regarded as an impotent factor in connection with the Allies' plans for the coming year, and until she gives some definite assurance that she is prepared to stand by her Allies, no good purpose can be served in flooding Archangel with military supplies which are likely to be used against that section of the Russian people opposed to a treacherous desertion of their Allies.

AMERICA'S MILITARY AID.

The organised industry of the United States of America, which was one of the main supports of Russia's military efficiency, is now being concentrated upon their own requirements. The fear that America's efforts on her own behalf would result in the neglect of Russia's military requirements need no longer be entertained, as it is plain that the intervention of the United States is going to be a bigger factor in the war than Russia is now likely to be. The statement made in one of the cabled messages this morning that plans are being considered for increasing the number of American troops to be sent to Europe in 1918 and 1919 to 5,000,000, sounds rather too good to be true. The task of equipping, transporting, and maintaining during the next two years half of this total would be a gigantic one, even if Great Britain and France rendered material assistance. A fair idea of America's available man-power was obtained as a result of the registration of all male residents who had reached the age of 21 years, but who were not yet 31 years of age. This was taken in June last, the total registration being 9,659,382, of whom 7,347,794 were white, 953,899 were coloured, 1,239,865 were unnaturalised foreigners from countries other than Germany, 111,823 were unnaturalised Germans, including "declarants," that is persons having declared their intentions to become citizens but not having received their final naturalisation papers, and 6,001 were Indians. It is obvious that the number of exemptions would reduce this total of over nine and a half million considerably. Apart from those who are medically unfit, there is the army of munition makers, and others to be provided for. America's assistance is not to consist of armies alone. The Allies are looking to her new ship-building yards to assist them in defeating the submarine menace, while her aeroplane factories have a task on hand which is almost equally important. A great number of her men of military age will also be required to remain at home in order that her industrial efficiency may not be impaired and in order that her armies in the field may be supplied with the war material, which is now as important as the armies themselves. It is, therefore, extremely doubtful whether America will be able to send 5,000,000 men to France within the next two years, even although their training would be completed on the Continent. The 700,000 whom General Crowder estimates will attain the military age each year will be an addition to the total registration quoted above, but will only represent the normal recruitment which sooner or later must be utilised to make good the inevitable losses.

"PEACE WITHOUT ANNEXATIONS."

According to the recent news from Russia, the Russian delegates at Brest Litovsk appear to be awakening to the fact that Germany's interpretation of that much-used phrase, "peace without annexations," is vastly different to that which the Russian extremists have placed upon it. In an article published in the "Atlantic Monthly" of November last, Andre Cheradame asserts that Germany taught the Russians to use the phrase. It would now appear as if she is trying to teach them to accept her interpretation of it. In the article referred to, which is entitled "The Fallacy of a German Peace," the writer says—"Every possible step has been taken by Germany to bring about peace on the basis of a draw. The slogan, 'Peace without annexations or indemnities,' was coined to that end. At first the Allies believed that this formula originated in Russia; as a matter of fact, however, it was worked out in Berlin, and then suggested to the Russian Socialists through secret agents whom Germany has successfully established in the Petrograd Soviet. These Socialists, doubtless well-meaning, but over-fond of theories, and always ready to embrace the wildest Utopian schemes . . . have declared enthusiastically for the 'peace without annexations or indemnities.' As there exist also in the other Allied countries groups of Socialists with a stronger grip on theories than on facts . . . the formula 'peace without annexations or indemnities,' thanks to its apparent origin, has unquestionably made serious inroads on a certain section of Allied public opinion. . . . To tell the truth, a section of Allied opinion has become befuddled by these formulae of Berlin, whose function is to accomplish in the moral order the same asphyxiating action as that of the gases employed on the battlefield by the German General Staff. The result of this moral intoxication is that important groups of the Allies begin to juggle with words and lose sight of facts. As the natural outcome of giving serious thought to impossibilities, grave errors are made in weighing the present situation, with an attendant weakening of the joint action of the Allied democracies. It is imperative, therefore, that the pursuit of Utopias, leading only to disaster, be abandoned, and that we return to those realities which alone can lead to victory, and the establishment of a durable peace. If the formula 'peace without annexations or indemnities' has been allowed to insinuate itself into the general discussion, it is only because great numbers of the Allied peoples fail to understand the overwhelming advantages which Germany, by means of the war, has been able to assure to herself for the present and the future."

LAND SCANDAL.

SOUTH AUSTRALIAN INQUIRY.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

Severe criticisms of the purchases of land for soldiers and other purposes by the late Vaughan Government resulted in the appointment of Mr. Noel Webb, S.M., as Royal Commissioner, to inquire into the transactions. He has now presented his report, which is one of the most sensational documents which have emanated from a Royal Commissioner in South Australia.

During the hearing one important witness refused to give evidence, and a special Act of Parliament was passed to compel him to do so. The first purchase dealt with is that of an estate near Adelaide, for which the Government paid £13,650. Mr. Webb finds that the true value of the property was £6515, and that the land was wholly unsuitable for the settlement of returned soldiers. He comments on the bad administration involved in the purchase of this property, but makes no imputation of fraud. With regard to the purchase of another property from the Adelaide Mental Home the commissioner, however, finds that the evidence overwhelmingly points to the conclusion that the then Chief Secretary (Mr. A. W. Styles), who is now Minister of Education in the Coalition Government, "Betrayed his trust as Minister of the Crown and assisted an agent named West in the carrying out of the transaction in which West took no risk and was able to make a profit of about £4000." West had this property under option from a private firm up to May 3, on which date Styles recommended to the Cabinet the purchase of the estate. After May 3 West decided to purchase the property. "And his only reason for buying it was to sell it to the Government. He accepted the offer on May 3 because on May 3 Styles had decided to recommend the Government to purchase the land. Styles expedited the matter so as to be able to inform West that he had recommended the purchase of this land to the Government. Styles had a clear duty as a man occupying a position of high public trust, to act in a manner which was not only above dishonour, but which was above suspicion. He has by his own conduct placed himself in a position to which suspicion must necessarily attach, but there is no evidence to justify me in forming a conclusion as to what his motive was, and why he helped West to acquire this land in the way he did. It is a most singular fact that West negotiated the purchase of £1000 worth of Government bonds at a period before he had received the bonds from the Government in payment for the land, and which latter stock he had already sold. It is also to be deeply regretted that Mr. West's explanation of the reason why he secured the £1000 worth of bonds is most unsatisfactory. I do not, however, draw the inference that the purchase of those bonds was connected with Mr. Styles. Whatever Mr. Styles's motive was he acted improperly, and in grave breach of his responsible duty as Minister of the Crown."

The Commission then refers to the proposed purchase of land in the south-east, which was offered to the Government on behalf of Hugh A. Morris and other landowners for £292,000. The Government valuator (Mr. E. B. Jones), who was asked to value the land, was an intimate associate of Morris, and Jones's sister was married to Morris's cousin. Jones's duty in such circumstances was abundantly clear. As a friend of a person who was to make a profit in this big transaction it was his duty to place before the Cabinet a clear document, setting out his relationship with Morris. Morris accompanied Jones when Jones made his valuation. This was indiscreet. The land, which was not worth £158,000, had been valued by Jones at more than £293,000. Such a difference could not be attributed to a mistake. The whole valuation was so exaggerated as to admit only of the explanation that Mr. Jones wilfully departed from his duty as Government valuer, and put untrue values on the land.

The Premier (Mr. Peake) to-day declined to comment upon the report.

MR. STYLES IN REPLY.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

Mr. Styles to-night made a long statement, in which he assails the Royal Commissioner (Mr. Webb). "Regarding Mr. Webb, he will probably remember how he paced my office on more than one occasion, beseeching that I would secure for him an appointment under the Vaughan Government," he said. "Surely any improper conduct which Mr. Webb thinks I have been guilty of falls into insignificance alongside the impropriety of a commissioner, who, while the hearing is proceeding, applies to the Cabinet, half of which is composed of men who are being judged by him, for a rise in salary. His report bristles with hostile phraseology, without any evidence at all to justify one solitary finding against me. Such hostile language is only to be expected from one, who, throughout the trial, showed a partisan spirit. It is interesting to note the way in which he has apparently distorted the evidence in order to try to justify the finding. Mr. Webb says the evidence overwhelmingly points to the conclusion that I betrayed my trust as a Minister of the Crown, and later, in his one solitary finding, says that I betrayed the business of the Government to Mr. West. There is not one single shred of evidence which points to this, nor is there any evidence from which could arise any suspicion that I had communicated anything, or had allowed anything to be communicated, to Mr. West. Another of Mr. Webb's nebulous and hysterical statements is that much of my evidence is untrue and misleading, and he quoted certain of my evidence without pointing to one solitary sentence in the whole of it which is untrue or misleading. It is easy for any man with a spiteful inclination to make statements. Mr. Webb apparently had a little twinge of conscience when he was so good as to mention he did not draw any inference that I made anything out of this transaction. Seeing there is not a tittle of evidence from which he could draw any such inference, I thank him for nothing. Although Mr. Webb condemns, the whole of his statements are without a shred of evidence to support them, and it seems to me a pity that there is no appeal from this political tribunal to a higher body."

RED CROSS.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLE DEPOT.

The report of the Red Cross Fruit and Vegetable Depot, 7 Wynyard-street, issued this week, shows that in December last 700 families of returned wounded and sick soldiers, and of the missing, killed, and prisoners of war, were supplied weekly with fruit and vegetables. During Christmas week each family received an additional supply, and every child a toy. The additional supplies and toys were either sent from country branches or were purchased, the donations having been received for that purpose. The proceeds of a recital given by a returned soldier helped in this direction.

The joint hon. secretaries point out that the depot is in constant need of donations in money and kind, to enable it to continue its good work, as in addition to looking after the families of the returned soldiers, and the widows and orphans of soldiers, supplies of fresh fruit and vegetables are sent every week to the Red Cross and Military convalescent homes and hospitals.

THE CRISIS.

MINISTRY'S POSITION

THE PLEDGE.

ANOTHER MEETING TO-DAY.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The result of the Federal Nationalist party meeting to-day was that the solution of the difficulty that has arisen is to be left in the hands of the Cabinet to deal with as it deems advisable, whilst giving honourable effect to the pledge given at Bendigo by the Prime Minister in opening the referendum campaign.

This decision was not arrived at without very considerable discussion, and even those who are Mr. Hughes' warmest supporters were by no means unanimous in the views they took of the situation. There was a general feeling that as such a pledge had been given it was the duty of the Cabinet to take the responsibility of deciding what its action should be. At the same time, even those who criticised Mr. Hughes adversely—and there were several who did so—were in agreement as to the great services that the Prime Minister had rendered to Australia and the Empire, and there was a marked display of friendliness towards him.

Prior to the consideration of this question another very important decision was arrived at, this being that the party would not support any course of action that would hand over the Government to the official Labour party. On this point there was unanimity, it being felt that as the Labour party was under the domination of outside influences it would be unfair both to the Empire and the Allies to entrust them with the reins of Government. A further argument used was that many negotiations of a very confidential nature were constantly passing between the Government and the home authorities, sometimes affecting relations with the Allies, and to hand such matters over to a Ministry that might be subject to outside influences would be grossly improper. However loyal members of a Labour Ministry might be, they could not, owing to the peculiar constitution of their party, act as independently as the grave circumstances which now prevailed made it necessary.

Many other similar arguments were used, and from the outset of the discussion it was evident that on this point the party was unanimous. This disposed of one of several aspects of the position which had presented themselves, and made the way clear for consideration of the main issue. Mr. Hughes set out the position in a very judicious statement. The gravity of the situation stared the party in the face, and the question was how it could best be overcome.

A motion that Mr. Chapman be entrusted with the formation of a Cabinet met with scant success, only seven members voting for it. This minority, however, did not account by any means for those who at first favoured the formation of an entirely new Ministry, but the arguments put forward on the other side against such a proposal were very strong.

It was held that the meeting should not arrogate to itself the right of dictating to the present Ministry, and that it was preferable that the full responsibility for what had taken place, and for what was to follow, should rest with the Prime Minister and his colleagues. This view prevailed, and a number who had originally intended to vote for the motion changed their minds.

The task which now confronts the Cabinet—and a meeting of Ministers will be held tomorrow morning—is to decide in what manner effect is to be given to the resolution passed by the party. The Cabinet is entrusted with the fullest authority. There was general acknowledgment at the party meeting that Mr. Hughes knew far more of the war situation than anyone else, and that he was consequently better able to judge upon these matters than other members of the party. It was for this reason mainly that the grave responsibility of decision was left with the Cabinet. Whatever action the Cabinet may decide to take—whether it be to advise the formation of an entirely new Ministry, composed of members not included in the present Cabinet, or whether it determines that in view of the gravity of the war situation the same Ministers should continue to hold office—the party expressed its determination to abide by it loyally. It is improbable that any action will be taken by the Cabinet during the week-end, but early next week developments are certain.

PRIME MINISTER'S STATEMENT.

At the conclusion of the meeting the Prime Minister made the following statement:—"The following resolution was agreed to by an overwhelming majority, 'That this party, in view of the recent declared attitude of the official Labour party on the vital questions of the conduct of the war and peace, declares that, in the interests of the country and the Empire, it will not support any course of action that will hand the government of the Commonwealth over to the official Labour party.'

"Two other motions were submitted," added Mr. Hughes, "and the first was, 'That this National party approves of the Government honouring the pledge it gave to the people, that unless it got the power asked for it could not and would not carry on the Government, by tendering its resignation, and that Mr. Austin Chapman be asked to form a Government.' To this the following amendment was submitted, 'That the matter be left in the hands of the Government, to take whatever steps it deems advisable to give honourable effect to the pledge given to the people of Australia.' This amendment was agreed to, with seven dissentients, and it then became the motion, and was carried."

Mr. Hughes continued, "This practically covered all the information of a documentary character that I can supply. As to the rest, I cannot say more than that the Cabinet will meet on Saturday morning at half-past 10 to consider the situation."

Prior to the party meeting this morning Cabinet met and sat for over an hour, but the the Prime Minister had no announcement to make.

LABOUR CAUCUS MARKING TIME.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Another meeting of the Federal Labour party was held at Parliament House this morning, but as the political situation, so far as the National party is concerned, had not developed sufficiently for the Labour caucus to take action, no decision was arrived at. Mr. Tudor, who presided, said that no motions were before the meeting, but the party would meet again on Tuesday next. This gathering would be the ordinary pre-sessional meeting. During the afternoon a meeting of the executive of the party was held.

"WHAT WE EXPECTED."

STATEMENT BY MR. RAE.

"It seems probable, from the news received from Melbourne, that the Government will practically evade its pledges and resume office, even if some slight change in the personnel of the Ministry takes place, and that is just what we expected to happen."

This statement was made by Mr. Arthur Rae, secretary to the No-Conscription campaign, yesterday. "Ever since the conscription issue arose the National Ministries, both State and Federal," he went on, "have seemed to make a virtue of breaking pledges rather than keeping them. It seems to me that even if Mr. Tudor had been given an opportunity to form a Ministry no good purpose could have been achieved unless he had the assurance from the Governor-General that in the event of being unable to carry on he would get a dissolution. As that position is not likely to arise, it is very much better that the party which attained office on a promise to assist materially in winning the war should be charged with the continued responsibility of finding the means to redeem their obligations. It is clear that the win-the-war cry was the means of securing the Government its majority, coupled with the further promise not to introduce conscription unless the Empire met with a reverse of a most disastrous character. In that sense the National Government was almost as much an anti-conscriptionist Government as its opponents could have wished, had they believed in the promises made to secure election. The failure of the Government to deal with matters of great national importance is so marked that the conscription cry was again raised largely for the purpose of deflecting the public mind from the consideration of the party's shortcomings. Any Labour Government assuming office at this juncture would have such a legacy of misdeeds and neglect to carry that without a substantial working majority in both Houses it would be hampered by insuperable obstacles. Those who can look beyond mere party interests must, at the same time, deeply regret that Australian politics can sink to such depths of degradation that the worst charges made against the ruling class of Germany bid fair to be outdone by those of our political leaders who have the destiny of this country in their hands. One thing is clear, that, whether the present Government retains office, or is replaced by another team from the same party, is that the policy of conscription must be definitely and finally abandoned. Whatever other issues may be shrouded in obscurity, in this, at least, the people have spoken with no uncertain voice, and it is unthinkable that any Government would dare to set aside the verdict. In this connection it is remarkable that while the soldiers at the front had scarcely any opportunity of discovering the attitude taken up by the anti-conscriptionists the increased 'No' vote proves that we gauged the soldiers' feelings on the question better than those who constituted themselves their champions. I have no doubt that if we could have placed our views and arguments before the soldiers with the same facility enjoyed by the Government there would have been an enormous majority for 'No.' I think that the present actions of the National party must ultimately result in its being so completely discredited that at the next appeal to the people its doom will be sealed. Admittedly the majority of the people have short political memories, but the present occurrences so far exceed in depravity anything previously experienced in our political history that it will be impossible to live them down within the life of the present Parliament."

"THE CONFIDENCE TRICK."

MR. RYAN ON MR. HUGHES.

BRISBANE, Friday.

The Premier (Mr. Ryan) made a statement to-day with regard to the Federal situation.

"If the Press reports as to the result of the meeting of Nationalists are true," said Mr Ryan, "then the farce which I expected has been perpetrated. The confidence trick has been played on the electors. The Prime Minister's pledge at Bendigo was, after all, a sham, a delusion, and a snare. The giving of the pledge was intended to dragoon the electors of Australia into voting 'Yes.' The giving of that pledge, combined with the large 'No' vote, has served the purpose of showing that the people of Australia are prepared emphatically to turn down the present Commonwealth Ministers and the party supporting them at the first opportunity. It is quite evident that members supporting the present Commonwealth Government are very much more concerned about saving their skins than about carrying out solemn pledges given by the Government. There will be no more squalid page in the history of Australia than the record of the Hughes' Government and the party supporting them. The Commonwealth Government have admittedly failed to provide adequate reinforcements under the voluntary system, and it is now up to them to give an opportunity to the Labour party and to the people of Australia to do what they themselves have failed to do. I am quite convinced that the people of Australia have no faith in the present Commonwealth Government or their pledges, and in order to have the voluntary system successfully carried out it is essential that the reins of government should be in the hands of the anti-conscriptionists. Such a Government, taking view of the whole war situation, would prescribe the task to be performed and the means of performing it. I have no doubt that they would succeed, but the fear of conscription must be removed. That can only be done by removing the present Government, and the party supporting them. Sir William Irvine seems to have taken the most proper view of the situation. It yet remains to be seen whether Sir William will back up his views by something more than mere words. It surely is his duty openly to fight for that view on the public platform, and in the House, by voice and vote. I suspend my judgment with regard to this attitude until I see further developments. The sorriest feature of yesterday's proceedings of the Nationalist party was the expression of opinion that a motion should be agreed to exonerating members of the party from the pledge given at Bendigo. To what further depths of political degradation is it possible to sink?"

PREPARING FOR AN ELECTION.

The executive committee of the New South Wales branch of the Australian Labour party is making preparations in case there should be a Federal election at an early date. Circulars have been sent by Mr. Evans (secretary) to the secretaries of branches, and No-conscription leagues in New South Wales to the effect that the political situation is most uncertain, and that the international situation is even worse. The recent referendum, he adds, revealed a very unsatisfactory state of enrolment. Too many of their supporters had failed to register. It was persistently rumoured that the electoral officer had received instructions to prepare for a Federal election in March next.

WAR AND SPORT.

THE ANNIVERSARY REGATTA.

JUDGE BACKHOUSE'S DECISION.

The Anniversary Regatta committee, at its meeting on Thursday night, had before it the following letter from Judge Backhouse, who had been appointed chairman:—

"After careful consideration and consultation with many of my friends, whose opinions I value, I have determined to take no part in the Anniversary Regatta this year. No one recognises more than I do the desirability of keeping the continuity of the oldest annual aquatic festival in the world; but it is of far greater importance to maintain the continuity of the Empire and not to do anything which may cause our feeling about the present situation to be misunderstood. This is totally different from that existing during the previous years of the war. Now that 'No' has carried the day—many young men, I fear, helped to bring about this result—I doubt whether there should be public competitions in any sport. Of this I am certain, that we lovers of true sport should set an example, and that under existing conditions we shall honour Anniversary Day 'more in the breach than the observance' of what we hitherto have properly considered a necessary part of keeping the holiday. I assure you that if I considered my wishes only I should not steer a course different from that of those with whom I have worked so pleasantly for many years, and whose seamanship in troubled waters is at least equal to my own. Believe me, yours sincerely, Alf. P. Backhouse."

The committee received the letter with feelings of very great regret, which the secretary was instructed to convey to Judge Backhouse, with an intimation that the committee did not propose to fill the position of chairman just yet, in the hope that his Honor would reconsider his decision.

STATE TRAWLERS.

The last fishing voyage of the State trawler Koraaga was principally carried out in very bad weather. Out of a voyage lasting 128 hours, it was only possible to fish 55½ hours. Good hauls of many kinds of deep-sea fish were made during this period, but the most remarkable feature of the voyage was the fact that a large number of marine crayfishes were again taken. These were taken at various spots from the Botany ground to off Wattamolla. Crayfish were taken in no fewer than nine separate hauls. From the results already achieved there is now very little doubt that crayfish will become a fairly regular item in the State deep-sea catches. If Mr. Stead's theory of the northward migration of these crayfish at times in immense "droves" is correct, it is thought probable that at times catches of many thousands of these crustaceans will be made by each trawler.

During the voyage the Koraaga had trouble with large sharks, in one case the cod end of the net being so destroyed that all the enclosed fish escaped.

THE PEA-RIFLE AGAIN.

Bertram John William Magee, aged 14 years, a son of Mr. John Thomas Magee, of Luddenham, was the victim of a pea-rifle fatality. At the inquest, Harold Herbert Magee, employed at the Crystal Glassworks, Redfern, and a cousin of the deceased, who was on a holiday at Luddenham, gave evidence that the deceased and he were out rabbit hunting with a pea-rifle. They started to dig a burrow out, and when near the end the rabbit was seen. Witness said, "Stand by till I reach the rifle," which was lying near by loaded and cocked. The rabbit jumped out, and the deceased leaned over and said, "Give me the rifle." As he leaned over and made the remark witness was pulling the trigger, and the rifle went off. The Coroner found that the deceased was accidentally shot by his cousin.

THE RECRUITING PROBLEM.

QUESTION FOR "NO" VOTERS.

Replying to Mr. Arthur Rae, Press representative of the No-Conscription campaign, Major S. J. Shillington (late organising secretary of the State Recruiting Committee) says:—

"Mr. Rae further defines the attitude of the Labour party towards the recruiting problem—an attitude that has had and is still having a most prejudicial effect on the work of raising reinforcements for our army. He sets out a number of proposals, dealing with:—(1) The final abandonment of conscription, (2) war profiteering; (3) more equitable contribution of wealth towards war expenditure; and (4) a more liberal scale of pay, pensions, and allowances.

"These proposals must be adopted, he says, before success in recruiting can be obtained by any political party. What the future policy of the National Government regarding the question of conscription will be remains to be seen, but it must be remembered that after the failure of the 1916 referendum the conscriptionists threw themselves wholeheartedly into the recruiting campaign that followed. Had the anti-conscriptionists done anything then to assist a system they professed to advocate, there would never have been any reason for holding another referendum, with its attendant bitterness and domestic strife. Conscription can now be averted for all time, if the leaders of Labour will come in and work for the success of voluntarism.

"With regard to war profiteering, it must be admitted that any Government that permits any trader to batten on the people at such a time as this is unworthy to hold office. Whether war profiteering is being carried on in Australia or not I cannot say, but it seems to me that the question has no bearing on the recruiting problem whatever. War profiteering is merely one of the catch words that are eagerly snatched up by those who are ever on the look-out for an excuse for shirking duty.

"The reference to the 'more equitable contribution of wealth towards the expenses of the war' is vague and nebulous, and comes ill from champions of 'no compulsion.' Our first great need in carrying on war to victory is man-power, but in this country the casual individual is to be at liberty to say whether this will be made available or not. With regard, however, to the raising of money required for war purposes (a matter of secondary importance) it would seem that the anti-conscriptionists favour compulsion.

"The fourth proposal—a more liberal scale of pay, pensions, and allowances—is commendable in so far as it relates to married men, a comparatively large number of whom have gone forward to fight for us, because so many eligible single men are shirking here at home; but there is a limit to what the country can spend, and already it is staggering under a grievous financial burden. Moreover, it must be remembered that within twelve months of the original enlistment of men for the A.I.F. liberal supplementary allowances have been made to dependents of soldiers from patriotic funds, and I claim that there is no financial distress to-day amongst soldiers' families. The policy of the State Recruiting Committee has always been to investigate any such cases of distress, and whenever found they have been promptly alleviated. In practically all such cases the distress has been due to some omission or oversight on the part of the soldier himself. Similar work has been carried out throughout the State by the War Service Committees, and the Win-the-War Leagues, established in every centre of population. These committees and leagues have done splendid work, and are continuing to do so, but it is significant that their members are, in nearly all cases, conscriptionists.

"I have but briefly touched on Mr. Rae's various proposals, and I do not think they merit more detailed criticism. It cannot be said that failure to adopt these proposals will constitute a reason justifying the Labour party in withholding its co-operation in obtaining reinforcements. The matters referred to by Mr. Rae are certainly put forward as an excuse by the 'slacker,' who is convinced that his political leaders are opposed to both conscription and voluntary enlistment; but from whatever point Mr. Rae's proposals are viewed, how can they affect the single, eligible man without dependents (of whom we still have something like 100,000)? Mr. Rae is, I understand, the father of sons who are fighting for us (and no doubt is proud of them, as he should be). I ask Mr. Rae if he would still have been proud of them had they said: 'We will not fight because war profiteering is going on,' or 'the pay is not enough—we will stop at home, and let the Germans win.' Yet he is encouraging single, eligible men to shirk their duty, and to shelter behind excuses that apparently have the approval of a powerful political party.

"Mr. Rae's final statement, that everyone outside of professional militarists and war profiteers would be against the continuance of the war for one day longer than could honourably be avoided, is one that will not meet with general acceptance. If the enemy undertook to make reparation for the wrongs they have perpetrated, a peace might be successfully brought about, but the Allies are fighting for more than that—they must exact guarantees that will prevent bloodthirsty autocrats from ever again plunging the world into the welter of war. The freedom of the whole world is at stake, and the fight must go on until that freedom is absolutely assured. Australia has played a splendid part in this fight for liberty, but she will not have done enough until she has done everything in her power. Many of those who still believe that conscription during the currency of this war would have been the fairer method recognise that the reinforcement of our army voluntarily is now the most important question of the day, and in no conceivable circumstances can the Labour leaders evade their grave responsibilities in this connection. Whatever their individual views may be of details of policy, it is the duty of all leaders of political or religious thought to identify themselves closely with the work that lies ahead, if the Allies are to achieve victory."

DIRECTOR-GENERAL'S APPEAL.

"SINK PARTY DIFFERENCES."

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Speaking to a meeting of citizens outside the Melbourne Town Hall this afternoon, the Director-General of Recruiting, Mr. Mackinnon, M.L.A., urged all loyalists in Australia to sink their party differences and all bitterness in order that the nation might resolutely carry on its part in the war effectively. To help to win the war and to get the needed recruits Australians must be a united people. They should make a great and determined effort to pull themselves together. During the past 14 months Australians had had two big elections; one in New South Wales, and another in the Commonwealth, and two referendums. That was an orgy of democracy, and surely we had had enough of it. Democracy was having a good time in Australia, but it would not make itself safe that way. The people of Australia were weary of one kind of warfare—party political strife. (Applause.) They should get rid of that spirit, and live and work together as one people. (Applause.) Moreover there was too much abuse and too little argument in many of the speeches that were delivered from the recruiting platforms. Those who were making that mistake were, no doubt, moved by the most patriotic motives, but men could never be persuaded by abuse to make personal sacrifices. If the gospel of common sense were preached amongst the people they would respond. The Australians were as patriotic as any people in the world. (Applause.) It grieved him to hear it said that Australians were not loyal because they had refused to have conscription for oversea service. Australia did not want to quit the war. (Applause.) She had sent more than 300,000 men oversea, and during the past year had sent practically 47,000 men away as reinforcements. That was at the rate of nearly four battalions a month. Who could say in the face of those facts that voluntarism had failed in Australia? No voluntary recruiting movement could give satisfactory results unless it was backed by a genuine and honest national determination. That had been spoiled by political and industrial strife, and the continued ebullition of party spirit. Surely we had had enough of that for the present. The way seemed to be more promising for patriotic co-operation than it had ever been. This was a time of peace and goodwill.

RECRUITING MEETINGS.

Lieutenant Thompson, Corporal Macnamara, Sergeant Browne, and Driver Martin were the speakers at the Martin-place recruiting meeting yesterday.

To-night, at 8 o'clock, in Martin-place Sergeant-major Glynn will show the latest war trophies. The 8 o'clock meeting on the Manly Corso will be addressed by Lieutenant Nicholls, Private Martin, Warrant-officer Blake, and Private Norman.

The following meetings have been arranged for to-morrow:—

BACK FROM FRANCE

MORE RETURNED SOLDIERS.

MILITARY DECORATIONS.

The necessity for filling the gaps in the ranks of Australia's fighting men on active service was emphasised yesterday by the return of 500 sick and wounded soldiers. Of the men who are temporarily or permanently unfit for military duty 330 were representatives of New South Wales—the remainder Queenslanders. Landing in Melbourne, the returned soldiers came to Sydney by special trains. The State Commandant, Brigadier-General Lee, and the Staff Officer for Invalids and Returned Soldiers, Captain Bell, were at the Central Railway Station. While the Liverpool Depot Band, under Warrant-officer Mellor, played lively music, flowers, chocolates, and cigarettes were distributed by the Cronulla Voluntary Aid Detachment. Representatives of the Marrickville and Randwick V.A.Ds. accompanied the trains from Albury.

The Queenslanders, who had morning tea served on the platform by the headquarters nursing division, were addressed by Brigadier-General Lee before they left for Brisbane. In the course of his speech the State Commandant said that the Governor-General had asked him to welcome and thank the Queenslanders, who had done their duty up to the hilt. In adding his own congratulations and good wishes he said he was glad to see so many of them returning home.

A squad of St. John Ambulance men—eight from Newtown, two from North Sydney, and two from Auburn—under Superintendent Le Breton, accompanied the Queenslanders. The Red Cross representatives supplied books, magazines, and newspapers.

Motor cars to carry the New South Wales men to the Anzac Buffet in the Domain were provided by members of the Red Cross Society and their friends. From 10 a.m. till noon the band of the Engineers, under Bandmaster Macpherson, played in the enclosure. Mosman and Strathfield V.A.Ds. saw that relations and friends had morning tea with the returned men, nearly all of whom had been invalided from France. Several of the returned men who had been in hospital spoke enthusiastically of the work of the British Red Cross and of the Australian helpers in that great organisation. Others spoke in terms of high appreciation of the War Chest administration of the Australian Comforts Fund and the operations of the Y.M.C.A.

Mr. C. J. Mannall, ex-Mayor of West Maitland, came to the buffet to meet his son, Private Harold Mannall, who lost one brother at the front, and who has another brother "in the ranks." Private Mannall, who is only 20, went away three years ago. He was wounded at Bapaume.

Major Arnall, formerly of East Maitland, who has been associated on active service with the Pioneers, said that the Pioneers have done and are still doing valuable work in France.

Private Harcourt Farlane, of Port Kembla, one of the youngest of the "home again" soldiers, is 19 years of age. After 14 months' service he was injured in the left leg while facing the Germans in Flanders.

Major A. Cooke-Russell, of North Sydney, who won the D.C.M. while serving under the late Lord Kitchener, has come back with the hope of being able to "do a little more for King and country." The major was second in command when "Carmichael's Thousand" left Sydney for the front.

MEN WITH HONOURS.

After three years' service, Lieut. Bert Bradford, of Quirindi, returned wearing the blue and white ribbon denoting the Military Cross decoration. This young officer saw service in the Gallipoli campaign and was there at the evacuation. Of the exploit which won for him such a high distinction, Lieut. Bradford would not speak. Persistent questions elicited the bare fact that he was invalided home suffering from the effects of a gun-shot wound in the left lung. The Military Cross was won "just before Bapaume" and it was personally presented by his Majesty the King at Buckingham Palace.

Corporal James Byers said he did not wish to say anything—and he didn't. It was learned, however, from a friend who met him at the buffet, that Private Byers, who is from North Sydney, had been away over two years and a half. The act for which he received the Military Medal was not disclosed.

In the retreat of Lagnicourt Private C. C. H. Wallace, of Newtown, who was attached to the Army Medical Corps on July 31, 1917, went out under heavy enemy shell-fire in "no man's land" and dressed and attended to a number of wounded Australians. For this gallant action he was awarded the D.C.M. It was in this action that Captain Aspinall, a well-known Sydney doctor, was killed. Private Wallace took part in the Gallipoli campaign, and from there went to Sinai, being subsequently attached to a British regiment in France. He was wounded in a knee at Ypres by shrapnel fire.

The Distinguished Conduct Medal was awarded to Sapper J. O'Connell, who enlisted from Woolwich, for going out under heavy fire and rescuing a mate. That was in July, 1916, on the Suez Canal. Subsequently Sapper O'Connell saw service in France, where he passed through the battles of Ypres, Comines, and Nieuport. Severe burns on the hand brought about his return to Australia.

Corporal W. Freeman, of Parramatta, won the D.C.M. for conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In the official record it is stated that "he took command of a post, and by his own magnificent personal example inspired his men to drive back a strong counter-attack."

Corporal W. R. Flack, of Darlinghurst, was awarded the Military Medal for his work as a stretcher-bearer at Pozieres. He was wounded at Bullecourt, and his right leg was amputated as a consequence. Corporal Flack saw service for two and a half years on the Gallipoli Peninsula and in France.

Sergeant Crowley, of Glen Innes, has the distinction of having been decorated with the King's and Queen's medals for services rendered in the Boer war. But this is not his only experience in the army, the veteran having taken part in the Zulu war. Sergeant Crowley again donned the khaki in 1914, and has fought in the historic battles along the Somme. He particularly wished to express his admiration of the magnificent treatment which he and his comrades had received during the return home. At every port of call, he said, the Red Cross and auxiliary organisations treated them with the utmost kindness.

BOTANY BOATING DISASTER.

TWO BODIES NOT RECOVERED.

Up to the present the bodies of Haberfield and Wilson, two of the victims of the boating disaster in Botany Bay on Monday last, have not been recovered. A thorough search of the vicinity of the accident has been made by the police, and, although a quantity of wreckage of the launch has been recovered, there have been no traces of the bodies.

During the past few days there has been some rough weather on the coast and it is thought likely the bodies have been carried out to sea.

BOOKMAKERS FINED.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Friday.

At the Auckland Police Court fines totalling £685 were imposed on eight men for illegal bookmaking.

MATRAVILLE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I read with some astonishment, in this morning's issue, of the operations of the Voluntary Workers' Association at Maroubra. Will you allow me to call the attention of the committee of the above association that where the work of town-planning is being carried out is in the district of Matraville, some considerable distance beyond Maroubra, and close to the Matraville Public School. This locality was gazetted, Matraville, a postal district, and a public school district about seven years ago (and great interest was taken in it by the late Mr. Dacey, M.L.A.) in honour and memory of James Mario Matra, a midshipman of Captain Cook's ship Endeavour, who, whilst that vessel lay in Botany Bay, in April-May, 1770, in all probability, from his predilection, formed one of the party that accompanied Cook, Banks, and Solander, on May 3, when they "went up the country a great distance, to examine it, and returned late," on which occasion an iron, glass-lined specimen bottle was broken and thrown away, the rusty and broken fragments being found 90 years after by Mr. Gerard Krefft in the wild and then desolate region, now included in Matraville. Shall this early pioneer, who was the first to lay a scheme, for colonising New South Wales, before the British Government, be deprived of the honour due to him? Shall the school which has sent 30 of its boys to the front to fight the Empire war, and which has subscribed £275 to the various war funds, be deprived of the name it is proud of? In the interests of the inhabitants of the district, who have no desire to be classed as living at Maroubra; in the interest of history, I ask the committee to refrain from pressing on this district a name that does not belong to it, and is misleading.

RED CROSS IN FRANCE

WORK AMONGST THE WOUNDED.

AN OFFICER'S ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

Letters from the society's commissioner in France and from the officer associated with the Australian medical services on the Western front tell an illuminating story of the period of unprecedented activity through which the Australian Red Cross has recently passed in France. The society's commissioner in France writes in regard to the installation by the Red Cross of coffee stalls, co-operating with the medical organisation at the advanced dressing stations:—

"Two stalls were carried on, the second of which we were officially asked to undertake at 7 p.m., and by midnight it was in full operation. The last seven or eight miles were traversed without light by the lorry carrying the supplies, showing the close proximity of the stall to the line. Unless one has seen the men coming in blood-stained and muddy, their appreciation of such fare can hardly be understood by the people of Australia, so far from the seat of hostilities. A hot drink, after 24 or 48 hours' fighting, under modern warfare conditions, puts new life into those suffering even from the severest wounds, and reminds them that the good folk at home are mindful of their comfort, and recognise, with appreciation, the sacrifices made for the Empire." Stretcher-bearers had special attention during these trying days, oilskin coats, gloves, smokes, and food comforts being freely issued to them.

The following letter has been received from the officer in charge of a large portion of the Australian medical services in the field in France:—

"A year has elapsed since, immediately after the Anzacs had emerged from the fierce battles of Pozieres and Mouquet Farm, I wrote to express to you the immense debt of gratitude incurred in the Somme to the Australian Red Cross, and its supporters, by all in this corps. Perhaps not even the sufferers, who so directly benefited, are in a better position to judge of the manifold boons bestowed than are the administrative service of this corps, for at every turn they find some of the Australian Red Cross's multifarious activities coming to their assistance, and alleviating the lot of the sick and wounded. I, therefore, again feel it my duty and privilege to write and tell you how much we have benefited during the past 12 months in the field at your hands. No matter how inaccessible their situation might be, the field ambulances have found themselves aided in the most substantial manner, and you, and your staff, always ready to supply all reasonable demands.

"Last November, when, after a short sojourn in the Ypres salient, this corps plunged into the mud of the Somme battlefield; when neither had the newly-won ground been consolidated, nor had preparations been made for the winter; when roads along which material for shelters could be brought hardly existed; when for some weeks the acute misery and discomfort inseparable from winter warfare under such conditions and weather seemed more than could be borne by any man, the Australian Red Cross came in, and proved its inestimable value to all. Blankets by the hundreds, socks, and sets of warm clothing by the thousand were at once supplied for the sufferers, who were being carried in with clothes sodden for days by incessant rain, caked to their necks in the battlefield mud. Baths and hot-water heaters to cleanse the men ill from trench vermin infected clothing, which for days they have been unable to remove, were supplied. Fuel stoves sent up by you brought the numbed and deadened limbs of many back to a grateful flow of comfort. Oil stoves warmed up food for the wounded man in some dugout where he was getting his dressing applied, and where his feet, sodden by standing up to his knees in water for many days and nights, were prevented from going on to a stage of inflammation and gangrene by the glow and warmth which the soups and meat extracts, heated on the primus stoves which you also supplied, put into his failing circulation. These primus stoves were one among many other things you supplied which were invaluable, as often theirs was the only flame it was possible to use in advanced dugouts without drawing shell-fire.

"Again, when our men had gone out of this inferno back to one of the ambulance rest stations, perhaps not suffering from illness sufficiently acute to justify their being removed to the base, but battered, worn, and shaken in every fibre from incessant battling in misery and mud, yet still determined to return to the front line, the Australian Red Cross stepped to their assistance during this week of recovery, and supplied bedsteads, mattresses, hot-water bottles, gowns, books, and other simple comforts, and even dainties, which enabled many war-worn and almost worn-out lads to realise that the people in Australia were doing all they could to make them feel that they realise their struggle out here, and are supporting their unconquerable spirit.

"At Christmas you filled our ambulances and rest stations again with good things to cheer up the men and make them realise this support still more vividly, and you kept everything going in the same way throughout the rigorous winter.

"Again in the recent battles, as the Anzacs pushed the German line farther and farther back at Messines, and from Ypres along the Menin and Zonnebeke roads, you and your staff still helped us in our difficulties the moment we called upon you at each advance. In telling you how grateful we are for what you have done and are doing, I feel that every subscriber to the Red Cross in Australia should have a reflected glow of gratitude and pride in his heart for all the work of this splendid branch of the Red Cross Society. From personal gratitude I have detailed a few of the society's activities, and I trust that in a small way it may enable some of the subscribers in Australia to realise in how many ways they are putting the essential spark of encouragement into the sick and wounded men who are battling against every form of hardship, and fighting manfully against difficulties, whether brought about by the machinations of man or by nature in her more relentless aspects, and which nowhere can she show more relentlessly than on the Flanders battlefield in winter.

"Whilst the Government has always played its part in supplying us in time with essentials, yet without your immediate aid in these hundred small ways, which mean so much to the sick and wounded, we should have often been in great difficulties, and for the way in which we always have been able to depend upon the prompt assistance of the Australian Red Cross we all feel most grateful."

SHIPBUILDING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In your issue of the 3rd and 4th, under the above heading, there appears a statement that Mr. W. J. Duggan, president of the Interstate Ship-building Conference, says it would be impossible for the ship-building industry to begin at once, as various unions concerned were not prepared to start without having their positions definitely defined regarding piecework, but if day labour was employed it could proceed at once, and Mr. Duggan goes on to say "I cannot understand the Prime Minister's object in creating any hope that there will be an immediate start with the ship-building industry when he has already stated that the commencement is contingent upon a satisfactory adjustment of labour." In your issue of to-day, the 4th, it is stated that a conference of representatives of the union would meet in Melbourne at an early date, and that the unions be asked to select delegates for which a meeting was held under the auspices of the Labour council. It was resolved that on account of the magnitude of the ship-building operations to request that three delegates be allowed for New South Wales. Now, Sir, what I want to point out is that between conferences and election of delegates and meeting of Labour councils, time is going on, we are losing lives at the front, and every day's delay means a great loss to the Empire. The industrial classes have had quite sufficient of these gentlemen of late. If we have to wait for the Labour council the mice will be in the wheat for some time to come. What is really wanted is for these men to be honest to their classes and put the true position up to the workers of the country, point out to them the absolute necessity of getting a move on in this business, what help it will be to their comrades at the front; and cruel and hateful as this terrible war is we shall never have such an opportunity of laying the foundation of such an industry again, which, in every other country is one of their main stays. It would employ thousands of men in our own land. For God's sake, men, don't bother whether it is piecework, or whether this or that is the work of joiner or cabinetmaker, or ship's carpenter, or whether it is the work of a plumber or the boiler-maker. Say to the Prime Minister: "How many do you want; we are the men who can turn them out as quickly and as good as any other country." Remember, men, the valuable asset you are creating for your country. The workers must realise what we are losing to-day in the fact that our colonial industries have been sadly neglected by these so-called leaders and delegates. My advice to Mr. Duggan and Co. is to wake up before someone else defines your position.

I am, etc., T. J. HOSKINS,
Parliament House.

REPATRIATION.

MINISTER'S STATEMENT.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Australian Soldiers' Repatriation Act provides for the appointment of a Repatriation Commission to consist of seven members, of which, by virtue of his office, the Minister shall be chairman. It is not legally possible to appoint the commission until the department is in a position to take over control and the Act is proclaimed, and a singular difficulty arises in the fact that until the regulations are prepared and approved, control by the department cannot be legally effected. The Minister for Repatriation, Senator Millen, some time ago invited the following gentlemen to act as members of the commission:—Ex-Private H. P. Moorehead (returned soldier), Lieut.-Colonel B. H. Owen (returned soldier), Sir Langdon Bonython, Messrs. Robert Gibson, E. Grayndler, and John Sanderson. In order to avoid as far as possible all unnecessary delay, the prospective members of the commission were asked if they would consent to act temporarily as a committee for the purpose of considering the material which has been prepared, and of submitting in advance the regulations necessary for the purpose of administration. It will then be possible to bring the regulations into force immediately after the Act is proclaimed. This proposal has been assented to, and the committee will hold their first meeting on the 15th inst.

Senator Millen stated to-day that experience had already demonstrated that the act passed in September last required amendment in a few important particulars. When that was effected, and the regulations were ready for gazettal the department would take over control of the administration throughout the Commonwealth. Meanwhile a very considerable amount of preparatory work had been accomplished or was proceeding both as to the internal mechanism of the department and the many activities contemplated for the assistance of returned men.

MR. W. E. SHAW'S RETIREMENT.

Mr. William Edward Shaw, managing director of the British-Australasian Tobacco Company Pty., Ltd., Raleigh Park, Kensington, has retired into private life, and, to mark the occasion, he was presented by the staff heads of the company with a suitably inscribed gold watch. It will be recollected that Mr. and Mrs. Shaw some time back presented their fine residence in Prospect-road, Summer Hill, to the Edith Cavell Memorial Association as a rest-home for nurses.

Mr. Shaw has also retired from the chairmanship of the board of the British Tobacco Company (Australia), Ltd., but retains a seat on the board as honorary director. He is an old Fort-street boy, and was born at Raymond Terrace, on the Hunter River. His father, who later retired into private life, was for many years agent for the Hunter River Steam Navigation Company, post and telegraph master, and coroner of the district. Mr. Shaw entered into commercial life in the early 'seventies in the office of Messrs. George A. Lloyd and Co., who conducted an extensive business in oversea shipping, into which Californian wheat and flour and Eastern products entered largely. This, with insurance agency and general shipping, afforded the young man every facility for acquiring commercial knowledge. Later in the 'seventies Mr. Shaw entered the service of Messrs. Dixson and Sons, tobacco manufacturers, Mr. Hugh Dixson, jun., being his brother-in-law, and has remained in the business ever since, taking part in the several progressive stages. In 1899 the firm was known as Dixson and Son, Ltd., and later became the Dixson Tobacco Company, Ltd., which occupied the site of the present T. and G. buildings, at the corner of Park and Elizabeth streets. In 1903 it amalgamated with the Cameron Co., of Melbourne, into the present British-Australasian Tobacco Company Pty., Ltd., and in 1904 was created the British Tobacco Company (Australia), Ltd., with an issued capital of £5,000,000. Mr. Shaw was elected chairman, and continued to hold that position up to the present date.

Mr. Shaw, whose wife is the only daughter of the late Mr. R. G. Vallack, the senior resident partner in the firm of W. Gardner and Co., York-street, is represented at the front by his eldest son, Captain W. E. V. Shaw, of the Canadian Artillery, who was at the storming of Vimy Ridge, and is now spending his second winter in France.

MAIN ROADS AND MOTOR CARS.

Considerable attention is now being given by the suburban councils to the question of the maintenance of the main roads, the contention being that the Government should maintain those roads, especially those regularly used by motor car tourists. Since the main Sydney-Parramatta-road fell into such a state of disrepair, motor traffic has been diverted to the Parramatta-Ryde-Sydney-road, with the result that this road, having to bear an undue amount of traffic, is also beginning to show signs of wear. On Monday last, after the Rosehill races, there was very heavy traffic on the road, and on one occasion, when the Ryde railway gates were closed for a few minutes, the local police counted a string of 77 cars which had assembled in these few minutes. They estimated that between 250 and 300 cars used the road that afternoon.

A MANLY MYSTERY.

About 7 o'clock on Thursday night, while making his usual rounds, William Johnson, who is the caretaker of the South Steyne dressing shed, found in a locker a suit of clothes, a grey soft felt hat, a cotton shirt, and a pair of tan boots. In a pocket of the clothing he found a card, on which was inscribed the name T. de Burgh, and a cheque book on the Dungog branch of the Bank of New South Wales. A watch and chain and a sum of money were also taken possession of by the caretaker. Upon being informed, the police made inquiries as to the identity of the missing owner, and subsequently learned that the things belonged to Mr. T. de Burgh, who was engaged on the construction of large waterworks at Dungog. It was thought by the police that the missing man had probably returned to Dungog, but further inquiries showed that he was seen in the city on Thursday. The incident has been further complicated by the disappearance of the missing man's motor, in which he drove down from Dungog, with the intention of spending the holidays in Sydney. The police would be glad of any information as to its whereabouts. The motor was of Scripps-Booth manufacture, and the registered number was 17,784.

THE MEAT TRADE.

Ald. C. S. Mallett, president of the Master Butchers' Association, in a rejoinder to Mr. King's reply to his remarks concerning the meat shortage, says that not 10 per cent. of the retail butchers have been able to get their requirements fully executed, especially in regard to mutton, which, Mr. King said, they could substitute. After having worked all the week he (Mr. Mallett), in common with many others, was unable to purchase a pound of mutton at the Government meat markets that morning. The increased demand caused by the large influx of visitors to Sydney at this season was the chief reason for the shortage, and a strong argument in favour of sales being held at least twice a week.

Questioned yesterday in regard to the matter, the chairman of the Metropolitan Meat Industry Board (Mr. G. H. King) said that, while two sales had been missed at Homebush on account of the holidays, the shortage that had followed as a natural consequence could not by any means be regarded as serious. He added jocularly that there was no question of meatless days. As a matter of fact, with the usual sales next week, normal conditions should again prevail by next Thursday. In the meantime there would be a little shortage, both in mutton and beef. The board had not seen fit to interfere with sales as arranged by agents, even if it could do so, the board recognising that a certain amount of discretion must be left to the agents in cancelling sales on any particular day. Whether on the present occasion they had not gone a little too far was another question, and was probably open to a difference of opinion.

DEATH OF MR. E. R. FAULKNER.

The death has occurred at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. C. A. Wulff, of Orange, of Mr. Edwin Rand Faulkner, of Bexley, Sydney, aged 79 years. Mr. Faulkner recently went to Orange to spend Christmas with his daughter, and contracted bronchial pneumonia, which, together with heart trouble, caused his death. He was born in Northampton, England, and arrived in Melbourne at the age of 16 years. He entered into business with his father, and later he went to Launceston. Some years later he came to Sydney, and founded a business as a leather dressing manufacturer, becoming one of the largest distributers in the State. He is survived by a widow, five sons, and four daughters, two sons being on active service in France. The funeral took place at Orange.

MINING CORPS.

IMPERIAL OFFICERS' APPRECIATION.

A SCRAP OF CONVERSATION.

(BY WILLIE WOMBAT.)

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE, Nov. 9.

The fine body of men who made up the quota of the Australian mining corps about established the record for any one battalion that has ever left Australia. The subsequent reinforcements further illustrate the great care that continues to be exercised in the selection of men who are sent forward to fill the gaps, which must be made in the ordinary course of active service. Considerable satisfaction is felt that the men coming forward continue to be of a high standard, for the reason that the miners, from their formation as a battalion, have always had a pride in themselves and a confidence peculiarly their own by reason of their maturity.

Mining companies, once established in a sector, remain there for a length of time, and as a result the various Australian companies have not always been with their own divisions, in fact, they have been with them very little. They have been mostly attached to Imperial Corps, and in the matter of administration and discipline the miners have actually come more under direct Imperial control than any other Australian units. Not only have they played the game, but in their great anxiety to outdo the Hun many little episodes that might have proved irksome have been brushed lightly aside. In their working experience in the field they have come in close contact with troops from all parts of the Empire—Englishmen, Irishmen, Scotsmen, Welshmen, Canadians, South Africans, and New Zealanders. All have lived in the same billets with them. These Australian "diggers" are widely known, and enjoy a marked popularity over the Western front. Troops have never been pleased to obey the order of duty in another direction when it meant severing connection with the Australian miners. This feeling applies to all ranks—officers and men. Such is the feeling of good fellowship among the Australian miners that if anything of importance is proposed all enter into it with a zest and enthusiasm that mean the success of the project.

I heard two Imperial officers discussing our miners a few days ago. These officers had been attached to an Australian mining unit, and had, therefore, actually worked with the miners. "They're a happy-go-lucky lot of devils, and real good-hearted fellows as well," remarked one. "There is no doubt about that," replied the other, "but what strikes me most is their fine comradeship and thoughtfulness for one another." And addressing an Australian officer he continued by asking: "Why is it that such excellent feelings of a so pronounced personal kind exist among such a large body of men?" "Oh," answered the Australian, "I suppose it is due to the fact that prior to coming to this war my men have been up against the forces of nature all their lives, and been in some tight corners, too. And now that they are in a job that demands the best of all their patience and endurance, and what is even of greater importance to them—the right to live—the great ties which bind these men in civil life have become very much strengthened, no doubt due to the surroundings in which they are so willingly working."

"I see," said the "Tommy" officer, "that accounts to a great extent for their many successes. Splendid." "I have no doubt about it," replied the Australian. "In ordinary times they are determined, well-disciplined men—real good fellows—accustomed to ups and downs of a variegated order, so that when it comes to a game like this—well, they're all out. It's neck or nothing with them."

I could not help at once seeing the point, and as a fact this scrap of conversation opened up an entirely new point for me as to their lives at war, although I knew that the miners were popular, and I knew, too, that any men, no matter where they came from in the Empire, who had worked and lived with them once would gladly do so again.

No doubt the fact that these men have more or less all their lives been up against the forces of nature has had much to do with some of the gallantry displayed on the battle-field, for the miners' path on the Western front has not been one of roses. Instead, it has been bristling with thorns. And when such is the case where determined men are concerned there is nothing else for it but to do all in their power to gain the upper-hand. The Australian miner has to his credit to-day that he has done his best and that he has mastered the Hun miners and their system, too.

NORTHERN COAL TRADE.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

The collieries have not yet recovered from the effects of the holidays, and consequently the amount of coal coming forward from all part of the coalfields is not sufficient to meet requirements. Several interstate steamers have been delayed waiting for coal, others will be delayed further, and probably will not be able to get the coal they require till next Tuesday or Wednesday. During the seven days ending to-day, sixteen interstate steamers loaded coal to the quantity of 34,370 tons, of which 27,015 tons were for Victoria, 5830 South Australia, 1000 Western Australia, and 525 for Queensland. In the corresponding period of last year 49,315 tons were shipped.

THE FEDERAL SITUATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The attitude of Sir William Irvine at the meeting of members of the Federal National party yesterday was in acute contrast to that of other Nationalists since the "No" vote became assured. I and other country residents are not impressed by isolated political statements so much as by the general tenor of a member's pronouncements. This being so, Mr. Fitzgerald (whose strictures appeared in yesterday's "Herald") and others who have been reviling Mr. Hughes suffer badly by contrast with Sir William, from whom censure of the Prime Minister would be at least consistent with his clearly-expressed opposition to the methods adopted to secure conscription. Yet we find Sir William complimenting instead of abusing Mr. Hughes, which shows a dignified contempt for the political opportunists who grasp at any chance to lead the electors to believe that they recognised that a wrong course was being pursued. But to the country electors there was one member of Parliament—and one only—who made it clear that he would have steered the "ship of state" another way. They are very sick of the shabby cleverness by which an attempt is made to show a great distinction where on the matter in question they will never recognise a difference. And while I do not agree with Sir William's ultra-conservatism, I cannot but applaud his high standard of political morality, which is altogether too unique in Australian politics. I am, etc.,

Woodstock, Jan. 4. KELL B. JEFFERY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Will you be good enough to spare a small space in the "Herald" for a very few words on the present Federal situation. I claim the privilege because, though never a party politician, and precluded by the worst of all disabilities—age—from active service, I have locally participated to my utmost capacity in the various phases of war work. I was a member of the original war service committee, a vice-president of the Win-the-War League, and a public speaker in favour of the Government proposals at each of the referendum campaigns.

To all those, and I hope they are the majority, who, in this time of acute anxiety, can submerge party feeling, one sentence in your able leader of to-day must specially appeal—"We are bound to seek every means of promoting unity." Yielding to none in my admiration for the Prime Minister, I still say that his continued occupation of the position will make unity so difficult as to be next to impossible. The leading part he was forced to play in the late bitter contest alone makes that certain, and other facts so well known as not to need mention here make that certainty doubly sure. If Mr. Hughes would only recognise this and sacrifice himself in the cause of unity he would give to Australia the biggest proof of his unselfish patriotism; while the almost unanimous party vote in his favour would remain a well-deserved solace in his temporary retirement. On the other hand, should he remain Prime Minister after his definite statements that his Government could not and would not govern without the powers he asked for as vital, political life will be degraded, and future political pledges will have the value of German scraps of paper.

To my mind the cause of unity is brought into the sphere of practical possibility by the statement of ex-Senator Rae in your issue this morning. Writing as the authorised promulgator of the views of his party he puts forward in language unmistakably plain the conditions which, in or out of office, will allow them to join hands in real help. Those conditions seem to me to be so eminently reasonable that at least they make the foundation for a conference which would unite us all. And a united Australia at this time would be an eternal credit to ourselves, a joy to our partners in the cause, and would raise Australian political life to a pinnacle of righteousness beyond the most exaggerated hopes of ordinary people like myself. Surely it is a consummation devoutly to be wished. Can it come to pass? I am, etc.,

KANTARA SOLDIERS' CLUB.

(BY TROOPER P. L. ROLLESTON, 6th A.L.H.)

It seems only right that the people of Australia should realise the magnitude of the work being done by the above club, and also the great and noble work Mrs. A. J. Chisholm and Miss Rania MacPhillamy are doing for the husbands, sons, and brothers of you in Australia.

This club has been working for close on twelve months, and since February last has been working day and night, so as to enable troops coming down from the Desert to get a hot meal at any time.

To give an idea of the quantity of food consumed when big "leave" parties cross at this junction (as many as 1100 men in each batch passing each way, the incoming men having breakfast, the outgoing lunch and tea) to meet the day's demands, the following quantities are used:—Bread, 800lb; butter, 180lb; meat, 300lb; bacon, 3 sides; eggs, 40,000; cakes, 16,000.

It must be understood the increase is due to the extra "leave" parties, in addition to our usual daily catering, the daily orders in ordinary times being as follow:—Bread, 400lb; butter, 112lb; tomatoes, 50lb; cucumbers, 100lb; cakes, 8000.

In addition to the above, cigarettes, tobacco, matches, salmon, sardines, tongues, sausages, milk, and chocolate are sold over the counter, slightly over cost price, so as to enable our boys and the English garrison here to get things as cheaply as possible.

To give some idea of the difficulties that have to be overcome, on three occasions the large marquee was blown down during a "Khamsin," and, notwithstanding this, a rough shelter was hastily erected and work carried on as usual.

Since the last mishap a large hut has been erected, measuring 80 feet by 40 feet, with wide verandah, where cane armchairs are placed for the men to take it easy and enjoy their pipes.

There is also sleeping accommodation for a limited number in a hut built for the purpose, and everything possible is being done for the boys' comfort.

On another occasion, during a very heavy morning rush, the side of the oven, used for frying eggs, burnt out, but that did not dismay those in charge, for without any delay tongues, sausages, and boiled eggs were put on, and everyone kept smiling.

Breakfast consists of from four to eight eggs (Egyptian), according to size, and bacon, boiled eggs, bread and butter, and tea, at a cost of 5 piastres (1s 0½d) per plate. Lunch, cold meat and salad, eggs, and tea, at the same price. Cakes can be bought at 1 piastre and ½ piastre each. The evening meal, when the garrison troops come in is boiled eggs, ½ piastre each, bread and butter, 1 piastre (large double slice), cakes, stewed fruit, and trifle.

The worries of such a large concern are endless, for the Egyptian tradesman is not always as good as his word, and delays in delivery are numerous, such as cucumbers not coming in in time to make salads, bread short, and butter arriving in an almost liquid state, which only a couple of hours in the ice chest can save. But, taking all these worries into consideration, the organisation is perfect, and every credit is due to the two ladies for the plucky way they overcome every difficulty. The staff consists of 28 Anzacs, 10 British, and 11 natives, and is run in three eight-hour shifts, all working their very utmost to help things along.

This grand work is greatly appreciated by the troops from the desert, who, after a long, tiring ride in trucks from the rail head, are glad and thankful to be able to get a nice hot meal on their arrival here, before going on to either Port Said or Cairo; and those returning, besides having a good meal, can obtain sandwiches, etc., for the return trip.

The club was visited and inspected by General Allenby, who expressed great satisfaction with all he saw, and said to the ladies on leaving: "It is more than good work; it is heroic."

It must be remembered that during the whole time the club has been in existence both Mrs. Chisholm and Miss MacPhillamy have lived here and personally superintended everything, and no other ladies nearer than Port Said have roughed it and gladly done so for the sake of the boys; and you can form a better idea now of how grand and plucky they are, considering the heat, sand, and flies, and every sort of discomfort, so that the troops may have a comfortable place to come to, giving up every thought of pleasure and living for the boys entirely.

What grander work can a woman do? And it is no wonder General Allenby called it "heroic."

If you in your comfortable homes in Australia will only realise what it means to be practically cut off from all social companionship with their own friends and exposed to every discomfort the desert is capable of, you will stand up and say: "May God abundantly bless these noble women for what they are doing for our dear boys in Egypt."

We often hear it said that the general idea is that the troops in Egypt are having a picnic, but when you think of your loved ones enduring heat, flies, dust, scarcity of water, to say nothing of endless sand, in fact, "everything" against them, and enduring this for three years, it is far from being a picnic, and it is especially hard on those grand old boys who joined up in 1914, and have carried on without a break all these years, barring an occasional trip to Port Said, Alexandria, or Cairo for a few days, and this at intervals from six to eight months, and this is entirely due to lack of reinforcements to take their places while they had a month or two with those dear ones they have not seen for so long, and the sight of whom would give them a new lease of life.

The following statement shows the number of men who passed through the club from January 27, 1917 to September 30 (which includes the garrison, who are regular customers):

Gross takings from 27/1/'17 to 30/9/'17, £21,800.

Number of men at estimated general average expenditure of 3½ piastres, 622,857.

Average number of men per day over whole period of 247 days, 2522.

Present average men per day on present taking of L.E., £140 to £200 per day, 4500 to 6000.

An officers' mess is also run, where it is a common occurrence to breakfast 80 officers. Sleeping accommodation can also be had for eight officers.

NAVAL CITIZEN FORCES.

One of our representatives yesterday referred to the District Naval Officer (Captain Brownlow) a letter by a correspondent signing himself "Fore-bowline," and complaining as being unfair to the experienced R.A.N.R. officer, of the status and pay granted to trainees under the compulsory cadet system. He complains that the Naval Board is sending a number of them to sea for a six months training course and then appointing them as acting sub-lieutenants, R.A.N.B., and that in that rank they receive the same pay and wear the same uniform as the R.A.N.R. sub-lieutenant; further, that an applicant for a commission in the R.A.N.R. must by virtue of his experience be a thoroughly competent seaman. He holds also that the cadets will never be of any use as seamen without years of training afloat, and that they should be trained as a good competent land force without being wholly soldiers.

Captain Brownlow, in reply, said: "The correspondent is evidently a disgruntled seafaring man, who, perhaps, does not possess the qualifications for the Royal Australian Naval Reserve, or who, if he has a commission, has found it impossible to be employed. There can be no comparison whatever between the Royal Australian Naval Reserve, which is composed of men in the merchant service on the same conditions as those obtaining in the Royal Naval Reserve at home, and the Royal Australian Naval Brigade, which is doing practically the same work as the R.N.V.R. in England. The Brigade is a product of the Defence Act, which is law, and until the law is altered under the compulsory training system things must go on exactly as they are doing under the regulations. The Act provides for compulsory training and also for the appointment of officers. The young officers who have been appointed are doing excellent work, and have fully justified their appointments."

VITAL STATISTICS.

Of the total births in the metropolis last month, 762 were of males and 723 of females. The rate, 23.32 per 1000 of population per annum, is unsatisfactory, as it is 17 per cent. below the average of the previous five years. The illegitimate birth-rate is 35 per cent. below the average of the previous five years. Of the total deaths, 331 were of males and 282 of females. The mortality rate, 9.63 per 1000 of population per annum, is very satisfactory, being 16 per cent. below the average of the previous five years. The infantile mortality, 67.2 per 1000 births, is 31 per cent. below the average for the month of December of the previous five years. Among the very old persons who died, five were aged 90, one 91, one 92, one 93, and one 97 years. During the month diarrhoea and enteritis contributed most largely to the death-roll with 73 deaths, followed by diseases of the heart 72, and cancer 66.

During the quarter ended December 31 there were 4774 births (2457 males and 2317 females), equivalent to a rate of 6.24 per 1000 of population, and 1794 deaths (1013 males and 781 females), or 2.35 per 1000. The birth-rate is 12.5 per cent., and the death-rate 15.0 per cent. below the corresponding quinquennial rates for the December quarter.

WAR CASUALTIES.

KILLED.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Taylor, 32 Crescent-street, Manly, have been notified that their son, Sub-Lieutenant Ralph Taylor, was killed on December 22. Before enlisting he was a member of the firm of Charters and Taylor, stock and station agents, Narrabri. He spent several weeks as secretary to the "Wallabies'" north-west route march prior to sailing for England. He was 24 years of age.

Mrs. F. J. Smart, of Kirribilli Point, has received advice that her son, Sapper Linde Smart, was killed in Belgium on December 10.

Corporal Claude Rundle Hill, second son of the late Mr. Augustus Hill, of Bowral, and Mrs. Hill, Somerset, Frinton, Essex, England, has been killed. He proceeded to England from America in 1915, and enlisted in the King's Liverpool Rifles, proceeding to France in 1916. He was shortly afterwards wounded and was killed on October 29 last.

Mr. and Mrs. George Thomson, of Innes-street, Arncliffe, have been notified that their son, Corporal Alex. Thomson, was killed in France on December 1. He was in the employ of Messrs. David Jones, Ltd., and had been away two years, serving in Egypt and France.

Mrs. E. Davison, of Rosny, Cammaray Estate, North Sydney, has been notified that Private Henry Fisher, of England, died of wounds in Belgium, on October 27. He was at the landing on Gallipoli, and was wounded whilst on the peninsula and again on the Somme. He was employed in the North Sydney tramway service.

Mr. Roby, railway ganger, of Homebush and Flemington, has received intelligence that his elder son, Private Erwin Roby, was killed on November 28.

DIED OF WOUNDS.

Mr. and Mrs. B. S. Martin, of Aberdeen, have received news that their son, Driver George B. Martin, died of wounds in Palestine on November 1. He enlisted in Lismore twelve days after the outbreak of war, was attached to the 2nd Light Horse Regiment, served seven months on Gallipoli, being one of the original Anzacs. A younger brother, Roy, is now serving in Egypt, and is attached to the Camel Corps.

Mrs. Ellen Rothery, 19 Norman-street, Hyde Park, has been notified that her son, Private Ernest Rothwell Rothery, has died of wounds received in France on October 29. He was the youngest son of the late Thomas Henry Rothery, of Yorkshire.

Private Arthur George Davis, of Cullen Bullen, died of wounds in France, October 12. He was one of a family of four, all of whom joined the colours. Two have now made the supreme sacrifice, one has been seriously wounded, and the fourth, a married man, is in the trenches. Private A. G. Davis was previously employed at the Invincible colliery, Cullen Bullen, as a machine miner, but resided at Lithgow during week-ends. He was 26 years of age.

SCOTTISH WOMEN'S WAR HOSPITALS.

This fund now stands at £5246, the amount aimed at being £20,000. The Scottish Women's War Hospitals are a triumph of women's organisation, which, starting on a small scale in Scotland, was destined to develop far beyond the dreams of its founder, and to become a world-wide movement.

During the first 22 months of the existence of the hospital at Royaumont, France, nearly 3000 operations were performed—all by women—Dr. Ivens, the surgeon in charge, sometimes remaining at this work for sixteen hours at a stretch. All the other work of the hospitals, from driving ambulance cars and stretcher-bearing to washing up dishes, is also done by women.

A number of Red Cross branches are taking a practical interest in this appeal, a further contribution having been received yesterday from the Belltrees branch, Scone. Many of the schools have also taken up the matter, and a number of them have sent contributions from their staffs or pupils. When the schools reopen a children's penny fund throughout the State will be inaugurated, with the approval of the Department of Education, and it is hoped that a considerable sum will be raised by this means.

Many firms have shown willingness to help the movement, and the committee gratefully acknowledges the offer of a free electric sign from the Pastoral Finance Association, and the exhibition of slides by ten of the J. D. Williams Picture Theatres, as well as a large number of other picture theatres in city and suburbs.

The following additional amounts are acknowledged:—R. H. Dangar, £25; Sydney Snow, Limited, and District Grand Royal Arch Chapter for New South Wales, £10/10/ each; F. Jago Smith and Mrs. W. S. Wilson, £10 each; Norman Macdonald (per Miss Jarvis-Hood), £8; Homebush Methodist Ladies' Church Aid (2nd donation), £6; Thomas Craig and Mrs. H. D. Fairfax, £3/3/ each; Mrs. D. R. McFarlane, Mrs. R. Robson and Mrs. M. R. McKern, £2/2/ each; Rev. James Hendry, Mrs. D. A. Mills, and Joseph Knox, £1/1/ each; Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Smith, £1; and smaller amounts.

Contributions should be addressed to the hon. treasurers, J. Russell French and H. H. Massie, 10 Phillip-street.

BATHING FATALITY.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

A distressing fatality occurred at Hampton to-night. A young man lost his life endeavouring to rescue his two sisters, who had unknowingly got into deep water. One of the girls was taken from the water in an exhausted condition by members of a life-saving club, and the other managed to scramble out by herself. The people, who are believed to belong to a family named Barber, residing at Malvern, were spending a holiday with some friends at Hampton. During the early part of the evening they went into the water to bathe. The sea was rough, and the girls got out of their depth.

MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL.

FINANCIAL.

FOOD CONTROL.

Some of the industrial unrest and many of the claims for continually increasing wages are due to the mounting prices of food. These prices the Commonwealth Government has attempted to keep within bounds by the process of fixing prices. That in fixing prices for essential commodities for household consumption the cost of living has been hindered in its upward trend is indubitable, and to stop it altogether we must look to natural forces. But the prices of a great many articles which are by no means necessary for household consumption are included in the list. How came it to be imagined that the price of plum puddings had an influence on the cost of living? The price of cocoa is fixed. Its consumption is small. Yet tea, of which immense quantities are drunk, is untouched. What have Glaxo and Lactogen to do with the cost of living? Yet their prices are fixed by a careful Government. And so is the price of soda ash and whitelead.

The scheme in Great Britain is much less ambitious, probably because of the greater complexity of the problem of how to control the supplies of forty-five million people. A closer control, however, is now being asked for, and the new scheme of the Ministry is to provide for the registration of customers at shops which will sell only to customers so registered. The Ministry of Food at the end of October issued a report on the steps taken to meet the recommendations of the Commissioners of Inquiry into Industrial Unrest, as far as they relate to the control of essential foodstuffs, the State limitation of profits derivable from their sale, and the reduction of their cost by means of a State subsidy or otherwise. That report states that all the principal foodstuffs have been brought under control—that is to say, bread and flour, meat, potatoes, sugar, tea, milk, butter, cheese, and bacon. Control has further been extended to certain subsidiary foods, such as jams, oatmeal, dried peas and beans, chocolate and sweetmeats, and also to feeding stuffs for live stock. Prices have been, or are being, fixed at every stage of production and distribution of controlled commodities from the stockyard or barn to the shop counter. The speculative middleman has been eliminated, and the charges that may be made by the necessary middleman and the retailer are being defined and regulated by fixing prices or profits.

The result of control is most obvious in the case of the three most important foods—bread, meat, and potatoes. The price of the 4lb loaf for cash over the counter is now /9, and of the 2lb loaf /4½. In some districts these loaves are being sold for less. A quartern of flour costs /8½. This means a reduction of 20 to 25 per cent. on the prices previously charged. It will cost the Exchequer at least £40,000,000, and may cost more. The prices to be paid for live cattle have been fixed on a descending scale so as to show an ultimate reduction of 20 to 25 per cent. Butchers' profits are limited to /2¼ per lb, or 20 per cent. on their fortnightly turnover, whichever is less. These measures should ultimately secure an average reduction in the retail price of meat equivalent to the reduction in the purchase price of cattle. As compared with last July, the wholesale price of British beef has fallen 17 per cent., and the wholesale price of mutton 19 per cent. This fall is already reflected in retail prices, but some time must elapse before its influence can be fully ascertained. As a result of the Prime Minister's guarantee to growers of £6 a ton, the acreage under potatoes has been considerably increased, and there is an abundant crop. The retail price of these is controlled, and will, as a rule, be about 1d per lb. It may be more in some districts where transport charges are large, and less in others where they are small.

Complaints in relation to sugar have centred on distribution rather than prices, and the new scheme of sugar distribution is designed to secure that such supplies as are available shall be distributed without suspicion of favour. It safeguards the position of the resident householder, whether he be rich or poor. The retail price, though not fixed by statutory order, is controlled by the Sugar Commission in such a way as to leave a reasonable margin only to all dealers concerned. It has been necessary to sanction an increase in the price of milk in accordance with a pledge given by the Government last spring with a view to securing an adequate supply during the winter. Prices are, however, fixed at all stages. Further, local food control committees are empowered to make their own arrangements for distribution, and the increased cost of production will not be allowed to interfere with the supply at reasonable prices to young children and invalids. The present retail prices of tea falling under the control scheme range from 2/4 to 3/ per lb. A certain amount of tea is not under control. Arrangements are being made to purchase, on behalf of the Government, the whole supplies needed for Britain, and so to extend control over all tea. The tea so purchased will be brought in requisitioned ships at appreciably reduced rates of freight, and there will be a substantial reduction in retail prices. A temporary shortage of tea is probably inevitable, but adequate supplies will be forthcoming later. Imported American and Canadian cheese of good quality is sold retail at the fixed price of 1/4 per lb. The prices of English cheese are being adjusted for the purpose of encouraging farmers to make more. Importation of butter has been taken over by the Government. Prices or profits are fixed provisionally at all stages. The import of bacon, hams, and lard has been or is being taken over by the Government, and prices will be fixed at all stages as soon as possible. Here, again, owing to world shortage and to increased army demands, a temporary shortage of supplies is probably inevitable.

In view of the suggestion that industrial unrest has been aggravated in certain districts by shortage of beer, Lord Rhondda has advised the War Cabinet to extend the increased barrelage of 33 1-3 per cent. permitted during the summer months to the ensuing quarter, and the Cabinet have assented to this proposal. Provision will be made to secure that only beer of an adequate gravity is designated as Government ale, and to fix prices for Government ale and beer of lower gravities sold in a public bar.

The demand for an authoritative and accessible statement of the Food Controller's policy has, it is hoped, been met by the publication of the "National Food Journal."

As to why prices are high, the report concludes: Increased currency causes an increased demand for goods. If currency is multiplied faster than the supply of commodities, the result is a rise in prices. If the increase of currency is accompanied by an actual falling off in the supply of commodities, the rise will be very marked. Assuming money to mean everything which is accepted in payment for goods, there is probably more money in circulation in the country than ever before, and a great deal of this money is spent in buying food. For various reasons there is actually less food to buy; there is increased consumption by the armies in the field; there is reduced production owing to shortage of labour at home; ships carrying foodstuffs are sunk, and there is a scarcity of available tonnage to bring in more food."

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

It is generally anticipated that, by Monday, the general markets will have settled down after the holidays, and that business will be resumed on a normal basis. Yesterday interest was centred chiefly in jute. The despatch of cornsacks to the country went on briskly, and the office of the Federal Price-fixing Commissioner reported that no appeals for supplies were being received from the country. Next year's requirements were being considered by some merchants. Calcutta exporting houses quoted 9/1 c.i.f. for July-August-September shipments. There was a fair inquiry from Queensland for woolpacks, and sales were made at 4/10½ and 4/11 net.

SWEDISH SEPARATORS.

The Consul-General for Sweden states that the allegation regarding export prohibition of Swedish separators is incorrect, and that no compensation article is required.

WHALE MEAT AND HIDES.

A writer in "Hide and Leather Journal" (America) says that a company at Moss Landing, Cal., has established a packing-house for whale meat, and will soon supply consumers on the Pacific coast. The whales are caught with trollers and harpoon guns. The whale is not a fish, but a mammal. The flesh is sold in steaks and roasts, free from bone and gristle, at 8 to 10 cents. per lb, and resembles good beef in flavour, texture, and appearance. Away up in Anchorage, Alaska, a company has been catching belugas, or white whales, all summer for their hides, meat, and oil. Tanning marine hides and skins is an old industry, but it has been a very neglected industry, largely because of uncertainty of supplies, and because other hides and skins, up to the outbreak of the great war in Europe, were cheap and plentiful, so that marine raw stock was neglected. Since values of hides and skins from land animals have risen to such terrific heights, there has been a widespread tendency among American tanners of light leathers to seek cheaper hides and skins, and they now hope to secure relief by getting hides and skins from the sea.

CALCUTTA JUTE MILLS.

For some time past there has been considerable discontent with the short-time agreement among the Calcutta jute mill companies that signed it when it seemed quite the best way to escape a threatened collapse. It is notorious that many would recently have liked to treat that agreement as the Germans treated a famous scrap of paper, but they did not dare. Pressure, however, was brought to bear on the committee of the Indian Jute Mills' Association to reconsider the position, the malcontents hoping that such reconsideration would result in their triumph. The committee of the Jute Mills' Association, however, instead of playing down to the clamour for a release of obligations, has sturdily resolved that every signatory to the short-time agreement is in honour bound to keep it, both because it is best for himself and for the jute industry at large.

BRITISH INDUSTRIES FAIR, 1918.

The third annual fair promoted by the Board of Trade will be opened on February 25 at premises placed at the disposal of the board by the Port of London Authority in Pennington-street, London, and will remain open for a fortnight. The two previous fairs, which were held at the Victoria and Albert Museum and the Imperial Institute, proved so successful in their object, viz., the promotion of trade in goods of British manufacture, that the space available was inadequate to meet the demands of exhibitors. Owing to the war, the fair will again be restricted to the following trades:—Earthenware and china, glass, fancy goods, paper, stationery and printing, toys and games. The building in which the fair will be held is conveniently situated for business men, and exceptionally well suited for the purpose in view. It contains about twice as much space as was available at the Victoria and Albert Museum, its area being sufficient to accommodate two full-sized Rugby football fields. As in past years, invitations to the fair will be issued by the Board of Trade (British Industries Fair), 10 Basinghall-street, London, E.C., and admission will be restricted to bona-fide buyers in the trades concerned.

FROZEN MEAT.

HOW THE ARMIES ARE FED.

The meat ration scale of the British Army allows 1lb of meat per man daily to the troops in the trenches, and ⅔lb to those in training camps. It further requires every soldier at the front to carry 1lb of meat in his kit.

The introduction of frozen meat has opened a new chapter in the history of provisioning of armies. It was supplied to the English Army for the first time during the South African campaign, and the success of the operation was undoubted. The popularity of frozen meat on the civil markets has, moreover, grown rapidly during the last few years, and before the war 40 per cent. of the meat consumed in Great Britain was brought from abroad in this way. At the very outset of the war it was decided to renew the South African experiment, and the Board of Trade at once entered into negotiations with firms importing meat from the Argentine for a monthly supply of 15,000 tons of frozen meat for the army and navy. Later a Meat Committee of the Board of Trade was set up and entrusted with the work of importing meat, not only for the use of the British Army, but also for the French and Italian Governments, and for the civil population of Great Britain. The principal source of supply is the Argentine, where running contracts have been entered into with the River Plate meat companies, which practically cover the whole of the export trade of South America. The patriotic action of the British dominions has also opened up a very valuable source of supply. Australia and New Zealand have reserved the entire surplus supply of meat for the use of the Imperial Government, and over £40,000,000 worth of beef, mutton, and lamb have been taken over.

To carry these enormous quantities of meat to the troops the Board of Trade has found it necessary to requisition the whole of the insulated space of the shipping engaged in the frozen meat traffic. Some of the meat is shipped to England, but the greater part of that required for the armies at the various fronts is carried directly to the base ports, where it is discharged to the cold stores erected for the purpose of storing meat until it is required for consumption. This method has obviated the necessity of holding up shipping unnecessarily. Upwards of 30,000 tons of meat per month are supplied by these methods to the British Army and 25,000 tons to the armies of our Allies. The cost up to the beginning of 1916 was about 6½d per lb, but it has since risen to about 8½d. The whole of the fresh meat issued to the army is thus entirely brought from abroad in a frozen state. Requisitioning in France is insignificant, and the herds of cattle which followed the troops in previous campaigns, and were slaughtered when required, have disappeared.

MINING.

OUR COPPER PRODUCTION.

The value of the copper exported from New South Wales for the first six months of the year exhibits an increase of £896,541, when compared with the similar period of 1916. With the aid of fresh capital, and the high price ruling for the metal, the Great Cobar Company produced upwards of 2500 tons very profitably, and has already repaid £30,000 of the £40,000 loaned by the Government. Much progress was made in the opening up of the enriched portion of the ore body at the No. 3 level of the C.S.A. mine, which is now in a good position to supply large quantities of excellent grade ore. Recently a second smelter was added with a view of treating a larger tonnage and for concentrating purposes. The plant at the Mount Hope mine, where the ore body at the 275ft level has been delimited to its true boundaries, was in full operation throughout the year, producing excellent results. The spur line to the Matakana Siding, the survey of which has already been completed, will, when constructed, greatly facilitate matters for the company. The Abercrombie mine in the Burraga division, formerly known as the Lloyd mine, may be mentioned as one likely to help the aggregate production.

The value of the copper production of this State to the end of 1916 was estimated at £13,478,976.

TIN-MINING IN THE STATE.

It is anticipated that the quantity and value of the tin produced during 1917 will exhibit a satisfactory advance on that for 1916. As in previous years, the major portion of the output was furnished by the dredging plants in the Tingha, Emmaville, and Wilson's Downfall and Glen Innes divisions. The high value gave a considerable stimulus to mining for this metal, and several additional sluicing plants were put into commission during the year. To May 31 last (six months' work) the Tingha plant of the Cope's Creek Central Tin-dredging Company, treated 72,213 cubic yards of material for a yield of 43½ tons of tin, whilst the two plants at Skeleton Creek, in the Glen Innes division, treated 86,471 cubic yards for a return of 26 tons, and 74,189 cubic yards of material for 28 tons of tin respectively. The output of the Y-Water (Emmaville) Tin Company totalled 98 tons of black tin, which was obtained from the treatment of 261,825 cubic yards of material, covering a period of six months ending July 31, 1917. Since its inception this company has sluiced 4,061,826 cubic yards for a yield of 2191 tons of black tin, equal to 1.211lb per yard. The Vegetable Creek Tin-mining Company produced 364 tons of tin from their alluvial mine at Emmaville for the year ended April 25, 1917. Reef mining was carried on chiefly at Butler's mine and Hart's mine in the Torrington district with satisfactory results.

There was considerable activity at Ardlethan, especially at and around the Carpathia mine, and also at the Bygoo end of the field.

RARE METALS.

With regard to mining for scheelite, the Damifino Mine, Hillgrove, was the only one in which the developments were satisfactory, and from which regular shipments of clean ore were made during the year.

Wolfram mining was carried on with more or less success in the Torrington district. The Block 14 Mine, which is the largest, and was closed for some time, was re-started on tribute.

The Bismuth Mine, owned in the same interests, was re-opened, and is producing good values. The Rockvale Mine was a consistent producer throughout the year.

The output of molybdenite from the mines in the Glen Innes, Deepwater, Tenterfield, and Pambula divisions compares more than favourably with that recorded for the preceding year.

The limestone and cement industry made satisfactory progress during the period under review. Mining for the various other minerals found in the State provided employment for a number of men, and it is anticipated that the value of the output will compare favourably with that for the year 1916.

MOUNT MORGAN GOLD MINING COMPANY.

The report of the directors of the Mount Morgan Gold Mining Co., Ltd., for the half year ended November 25, 1917, states that the total revenue for the half-year from all sources amounted to £625,160, and that the expenditure charged to profit and loss account, including development and depreciation was £500,316, thus showing surplus for the half-year of £124,844. Dividends amounting to £100,000 were paid on August 1 and October 31, 1917, and, after taking into account the balance brought forward from the previous year, there remained £120,830 to be carried forward. A further dividend amounting to £50,000, being at the rate of 1/ per share, was declared payable on December 31, 1917. The reserves, insurance, and contingent funds, together with undivided profits, amounted to £513,556. The liquid assets amounted to £491,663. The 1399 tons of copper on hand at May 27 have been shipped and realised £118 per ton. The balance of the output of refined copper during the past six months has been sold to the British Munitions Department at £116/13/4 per ton f.o.b. Sydney. At the close of the period 874 tons remained on hand. This is valued as hitherto at £55 per ton. Pursuant to the desire and in furtherance of the policy of the Commonwealth Government, the company has joined with other Australian producers of copper in the formation of Copper Producers' Association, Pty., Ltd. All future sales of copper will be made through the association. It is anticipated that advantages will accrue in the more direct realisation of the Australian production by a central organisation. The State Arbitration Court, has, during the half-year considered applications by employees for increased wages, although after carefully considering the evidence, the presiding Judge stated that an increase in the basic wage was not warranted, he decided to award a War Bonus of 6d per shift to the employees affected by the awards. This bonus had the effect of increasing the wages bill by over £15,000 per annum. Subsequently, on appeal by the A.W.U., the rate of pay was further increased 4d per shift all round, notwithstanding the evidence submitted that there had been no increase in living costs; the total effect of the bonus, plus this added award, is an increase in our wage cost of £25,000 per annum.

NOTES.

The Brilliant Extended Gold-Mining Company crushed 270 tons of ore for gold to the value of £1527, and cyanided 450 tons for a return of £450.

The Larut Dredge recovered 41 tons of tin oxide from 87,000 cubic yards of ground, in a run of 619 hours during the month of December. The average recovery was 1.05lb of tin oxide per cubic yard.

During December the dredge of the Tin Bentong Company worked 616 hours, dredged 74,000 cubic yards, and won 37⅞ tons of black tin, valued at £6183.

GAS EMPLOYEES' UNION.

A mass meeting of the members of the Gas Employees' Union was held at the Trades Hall on Thursday night for the purpose of considering a proposal that members should join the Federated Gas Employees' Industrial Union of Australia. Mr. A. MacFarlane (vice-president) was in the chair. The following motion was carried, there being only one dissentient:—"That this meeting as a body endorses the rules of the Federated Gas Employees' Industrial Union, and we pledge ourselves to join that organisation in a body." The branch rules were adopted en globo.

The chairman said he would like to get the feeling of the meeting in regard to the remarks passed by Judge Rolin when the secretary (Mr. Rawlin) was giving evidence recently. Mr. Rawlin, the chairman said, was always truthful, and carried out the business in a straightforward manner, and he hoped the meeting would pass a vote of confidence in him. The following motion was unanimously carried:—"That we, the members of the Gas Employees' Union, still retain confidence in our secretary (Mr. Rawlin), and, further, we repudiate Judge Rolin's opinion of him."

ADULTERATED MILK.

BATHURST, Friday.

A fine of £20 with costs was imposed by Mr. A. B. C. Burke, acting S.M., at the Bathurst Police Court this morning, on James Lilley, a local dairyman, for selling adulterated milk. It was stated in evidence that the analysis had shown a deficiency of 18.7 per cent. in milk fat, and that the defendant had previously been fined amounts totalling £35.

AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.

A feature of more than ordinary interest in the pressure distribution of the past few days has been the persistence of a ridge of "high" on and in the vicinity of the coast of New South Wales. This eastern "high" has apparently moved bodily eastward to the extent of about 600 miles, and its centre has gained about one-tenth of an inch in barometric value, over New Zealand. During Thursday night considerable cloud areas were moving from the ocean over the seaboard, and some scattered very light to moderate rainfall resulted north from Kiama. Much heat was present on Friday morning over the State generally, and the prospects favoured the occurrence of thundery conditions with rain over inland parts, which should ultimately reach the coastal districts by Saturday. A rather rapid easting also has been made by the "high" pressure to the westward, its advance isobar being at 9 a.m. on Friday just about the western borders of New South Wales and Victoria. As it possesses a good deal of energy, the cool southerly change, which will accompany its further movements, should be strong and squally, and cause considerable reductions in temperature. This cool change is due on the coast on Saturday, and should be associated with more showers with thunder there.

Ocean Forecast: Generally smooth to moderate; stormy indications on the north-west coast.

SANDS'S 1918 DIRECTORY.

Sands's Directory for 1918, a copy of which has been received by us, marks the 58th year of its publication. The Directory comprises a classified list of city and suburban streets, a complete Sydney, suburban, and country commercial alphabetical list, a country town section, including farmers and graziers, a pastoral section giving the area of stations, nearest post town, number of horses, cattle, and sheep, together with a list of the public watering places of New South Wales, including dams, tanks, and wells; a classified list of trades and professions, a Government section, covering educational, Parliamentary (Commonwealth and State), civil, naval, and military matters, a list of wharfage and tonnage rates, and of stamp duties, and other miscellaneous matter. The book is now a more complete work of reference by the inclusion of farmers and graziers in the country town section and of the country commercial list in the general alphabetical section. Special care has been taken in the production of the work, and as a book of reference its usefulness is appreciated fully by all the large number of business men, who for so many years have used and trusted its immense mass of information.

AMERICA'S FIRST PRISONER.

The first German to be taken a prisoner of war by the Americans at the front is reported to have died in a field hospital from wounds received in No Man's Land from an American patrol. The man was a mail carrier, and was carrying letters of some value. He explained that he lost his way in the dark. He failed to halt when challenged. He asserted that he had no knowledge that there were Americans on the front, as the German officers had not communicated the fact to their men.

NEW MUSIC.

Messrs. Enoch and Sons, of London, forward their latest song-publications, which include several compositions of special merit. "Garden of Happiness," a setting of Edward Lockton's lyrics by Daniel Wood, is a charming song with a beautifully harmonised accompaniment, and is thus not unworthy of association with the words "fragrant and sweet with wondrous flowers aglow." "Good-bye and God Be With You," by May H. Brahe, discloses a broad vein of melody, which could be effectively treated by a rich mezzo, or contralto, voice. "Bird of My Heart," is a pretty song by Jack Thompson, with a taking valse refrain. "When Eldand Bugles Blow," by Douglas Grant, is a buoyant and joyous song, which would be useful as an encore-number, or as an extra piece for a fairy Queen in a pantomime. "A Little Love Serenade," by Landon Ronald, is graceful in its suggestion of rapid flight, and the voice is profusely supported by the piano. The same well-known musician has set with unexpected modulations "A Cradle Song," from William Blake's "Four Songs of Innocence," to a vocal theme that is simple and attractive.

Sir Edward Elgar is associated with Rudyard Kipling in two numbers, of which greater success falls to "The Sweepers." This is taken from "The Fringes of the Fleet," and describes the dangerous work off the Foreland (whether North Foreland or South is not stated) in a species of accompanied recitative which is effective. The alert musical refrain, alluding to "Unity," "Claribel," "Assyrian," "Stormcock," and "Golden Gain," possesses the right nautical flavour, and a baritone or bass singer would be able to thoroughly interest an audience with it. "The Lowestoft Boat" is a "Chanty," the lyrics of which include the line "Mark well what I do say." Generally speaking, this song would require a nautical audience for proper appreciation. "Countryman's Chorus," by Edward German, is a breezy and animated example of this composer's style ("This is the home of the free, Sir"), with a touch of old-world sentiment in it. "Love's Homage," by Jack Thompson, is a refined but occasionally reminiscent composition, melodiously attractive, and of a popular character. "Home of Mine," by Westell Gordon, is in the weepful minor key of G minor, but there is a pleasing change to G major affording a contrast which wins acceptance for the whole.

One of the best new songs launched for some time is Easthope Martin's "Your Eyes the Stars" (from the Song-Cycle for four voices, "The Philosopher and the Lady"). This is a beautiful composition in a very modern style, full of charmful dissonances well calculated to waken "the moon-enchanted nightingale," and is so interesting that many people will like to play it as a pianoforte piece. "You Took Me to Your Heart," by May H. Brahe, is tenderly sentimental, with an accompaniment which may be played with a light caressing hand, though doubtless a firmer interpretation would also prove effective.

AUSTRALIAN WAR WORK IN LONDON.

(BY ARTHUR MASON.)

VII.—THE AUSTRALIAN Y.M.C.A.

The A.I.F. and War Chest Club has already been described as a highly popular rendezvous of the Australian soldier in London, and the Anzac Buffet as of undiminished attractiveness to the men of our country, who, wandering the interminable labyrinth of the London streets, find it just the haven of rest and recreation they need. But the great patronage of these places notwithstanding, and despite the innumerable allurements aimed at the soldier by the kindly agencies of one sort and another that draw him here, there, and everywhere towards the interests and amusements of London life, there is room, it seems, for the Australian Y.M.C.A. to extend to him its own invitation and to offer him, lest he have missed it elsewhere, a meeting-place, a house of good cheer, an anchorage where he may rest awhile outside the rush and noise of this crowded life. And, beginning its work in no hesitant way, the Australian Y.M.C.A. has taken over with that object the Aldwych Theatre, a well known, very comfortable, and reasonably central London playhouse.

The ground-floor auditorium at the Aldwych consisted of stalls seats, and pit seats behind the stalls, with a barrier between. The seats have been removed for the purpose of the Y.M.C.A., and where the stalls once were is now a comfortable lounge, with easy chairs strewn about it, and writing tables and newspapers and a little shop on one side for the sale of smokers' needs. The barrier between the stalls and the pit remains. For where the pit seats were is now the Y.M.C.A. canteen, where the men may get light teas or more substantial meals—and the old barrier makes a convenient dividing line between this eating place and the lounge below. The dress-circle, and the balcony above it, remain as they were. They will provide useful seating accommodation for the audiences certain to come in future days to the concerts and the theatrical performances which the Y.M.C.A. intends to provide, and in the cause of which many artists have already promised their assistance. In that regard the fully equipped stage of the Aldwych—where Mr. Seymour Hicks once displayed the attractively peopled scenes of "The Beauty of Bath" and "The Gay Gordons," and where, more recently, Sir Thomas Beecham presented London with a season of opera in English—will be a very valuable possession.

This highly elaborate Y.M.C.A. "hut" has not yet been formally opened as such. But it is open all the same, and already soldiers have discovered it and are to be seen within its lounge writing their letters or reading, or gossiping, or taking a meal in the canteen. The general appearance of the place is one of great cheerfulness, and in the winter days and nights now coming upon us this transformed Aldwych Theatre—open to all soldiers—will undoubtedly take to itself a large share of the floating soldier-population of London. Mr. L. Jenner, of Melbourne, is in charge of the social and entertainment side of the enterprise, and Mr. J. G. Wells, from the same city, supervises the business arrangements, the canteen, etc., while Mrs. Bryant, an English lady who has done much for the work of the Y.M.C.A., is the lady president, in charge, more especially, of the many young women already enrolled as attendants.

ENGLISH HOSPITALITY.

It will be well known in Australia that great and generous provision has been available for many months past to Australian soldiers by reason of the numberless invitations at the War Chest Club, the Anzac Buffet, the Red Cross offices, and other centres, from English people eager to do something to entertain men who, being in England, are so far from their own folk. Those invitations still shower upon the officials handling this side of the London work for Australia, and acceptance of them still places the men most comfortably in English houses for a few days of their furlough. There is also a large amount of kindness of that sort available to the officers. Two instances of it by now are very familiar in London, the hospitality, that is to say, provided by the Hon. Mrs. Henry Edwardes and the Countess of Harrowby, respectively—neither of them Australians, but each of them possessed of unbounded energy in good works on behalf of the Australian soldier. The Wednesday and Sunday afternoon parties at the Knightsbridge house of Mrs. Edwardes have been in continuous progress for many months, and any Australian officer may drop in there quite informally and be certain of a warm welcome. The hostess, physically an invalid, is vigorous of mind and heart, and she has actively about her many pleasant people, who see to it that the hour or two the men spend with them shall not be dull. There is always music, by artists brought in specially, and while the surroundings generally are those to be expected in such a home, there is not the slightest suspicion of stiffness. On the contrary, Mrs. Edwardes insists upon a free and easy sociability, so that it is quite in the scheme that the drawing-room should frequently ring to the chorus of some popular song, and that it should be cleared, towards the end of the afternoon, for an impromptu dance. Apart from that, there is a useful atmosphere of refinement, and very often the visitors entertaining the soldiers include people of high social position. In this latter regard Mrs. Edwardes' entertainment of the men expands into their entertainment by her friends, with the result that many houses of a desirable sort are opened to them.

The Countess of Harrowby is similarly engaged on behalf of the Australian officers in London, and similarly canvasses the hospitals in search of the convalescent among them. She is at home to all Australian officers on Sunday afternoons from 4 o'clock to 7, at which time her house in Grosvenor-place is now a popular Australian resort. In addition, she arranges for their entertainment in various ways, in which connection may be quoted here one of her messages to our soldiers. "Lady Harrowby"—it runs—"will be delighted to see any officers any morning, except Sunday, between 10 and 11.30 a.m. and on Tuesday and Friday afternoons between 2 and 3 p.m. to make arrangements should they care to go and stay during their leave with friends of hers in England, Scotland, and Ireland." That will be admitted to be a comprehensive kindness, at any rate, and it is typical of much that goes on. I have also before me a list of one week's entertainment of Australian officers at this source. It runs: "Sunday—Lady Harrowby at home, 19 Grosvenor-place, 4-7 p.m. Monday—By train to Hatfield House (the historic seat of the Cecils), tennis and tea. Tuesday—Officers shown over Royal Mint or Projectile Factory, or visit Windsor Castle. Tea at the Castle. Wednesday—Hon. Mrs. Edwardes at home, 3.30 to 7 p.m. Thursday—Tea with Mrs. Allan at Houses of Parliament. Friday—Officers shown over Royal stables, thence to tea. Saturday—Visit to Holland House. Tea with Lady Ilchester."

Such is some of the generosity of provision for our men at the hands of English ladies. None of them who has ever shared in it—and by now they are a vast number—will be likely to forget it, and less likely to forget it when it has been of this quality—unobtrusive, without fuss, and thorough, very charmingly offered, and very perfectly carried out.

WOMEN'S HOSPITAL, CROWN-STREET.

Following on the announcement made some time ago in these columns that a well-known citizen had promised £100 to the building fund of the Women's Hospital, Crown-street, conditionally on nine others doing likewise, the secretary, Miss Mona Daley, now reports that Mr. Sam Hordern has also offered £100 on the same condition. Mr. G. B. Upton has given a cheque for £100 towards this special thousand, and as the other two offers are conditional on the ten hundred-pound cheques being obtained, the hon. treasurer (Mr. R. S. Wickham) hopes that the remaining £700 will be given, more particularly as it would enable building operations to be commenced immediately.

HOME FOR SOLDIER'S WIDOW.

A brick cottage was opened by the Mayor of Alexandria (Alderman Wassell), on Saturday, December 29, at 66 Suttor-street, Alexandria, on behalf of the Voluntary Workers' Association, and was handed over to the widow of Private F. H. Ireland, who was killed in France, on November 3, 1916. The Mayor pointed out that it was the first cottage erected in the district by the association. It was commenced in June, and was finished in December. The work was carried out under the instructions of the foreman of works (Mr. W. Setchell).

THE BABY BONUS.

LITHGOW, Friday.

During the last year the total birth registrations were 430, which is slightly below the average here, and gives a percentage of 28.5 per 1000, taking the population of the town and the immediate district at 15,000. During 1917 baby bonuses were paid in respect to 428 claims. In no instance was the bonus refused, though there was a case of the amount being given to a patriotic fund.

AMUSEMENTS.

HER MAJESTY'S—"THE BING BOYS."

There will be a 2 o'clock matinee to-day of "The Bing Boys" at Her Majesty's Theatre, where the public, recognising the lavish mounting, the constant scenic and costume changes, and the sustained feast of colour, supplemented by bright music, is eagerly crowding the house. Messrs. Jack Cannot and Leslie Holland and Miss Minnie Love, are the prime funmakers, with Maie Baird and Clyde Cooke for the graceful dances, and Ethel Cadman and Nellie Payne and Reginald Roberts in vocal parts.

PALACE—"THE NEW HENRIETTA."

The last six nights of "The New Henrietta" are notified, though the new comedy-drama is drawing large audiences. It affords an amusing glimpse of social and Stock Exchange life in New York, and roars of laughter attend "The wooing o't" between the elderly mining magnate and the fashionable widow, characters played with humour and skill by Walter Richardson and Emily Fitzroy, with Stapleton Kent as the clerical interloper. Mirthful scenes between the younger lovers, John Junior and Lizette Parkes, are also enjoyed.

"TURN TO THE RIGHT."

Next Saturday evening Messrs. J. and N. Tait will revive, at the Palace Theatre, "Turn to the Right," the popular comedy by Winchell Smith, which had such a sensational success last year. The cast will be the same as the original production, with the exception that Miss Lillian Tucker will play the part of Elsie Tillinger, and Miss Alma Rock-Phillips the part of Jessie Strong.

"PETER PAN" AT THE CRITERION.

J. M. Barrie's fairy play, "Peter Pan," has been so much admired in other parts of the world, where it is a recognised Christmas piece, that playgoers gladly embrace current opportunities of seeing Kathlene Macdonell in her delightfully brusque and boyish scenes with the gentle Wendy. The last twelve nights are now notified, however, as on Saturday, January 19, that strong emotional play, "The Outcast," will be revived, and on January 26 Miss Macdonell and Mr. Waldron will appear in the new play, "The Willow Tree," described in our "Music and Drama" column.

"THE RAJAH OF SHIVAPORE."

The final performance to-night of Alfred Hill's and David Souter's bright comic opera "The Rajah of Shivapore" is preliminary to production in Brisbane next Saturday. The Playhouse should be crowded for to-night's farewell to this melodious and amusing Oriental musical play, and the clever people who figure in it. On the purely musical side George Whitehead, John Quinlan, and Alice Bennetto sustain the interest, piquant humour falls to Frederick Ward, Frank Hawthorne, and Vera Spaull, and dancing to Myra Morrison, whilst the choral contributions are admirable.

ROYAL—"HOUSE THAT JACK BUILT."

Daily 2 o'clock matinees mark the vacation season of juvenile pantomime at the Theatre Royal, all the beautiful scenery and original effects of the adult production of "The House that Jack Built" being lavishly in evidence once again to attract playgoers. All the children have been wonderfully well trained, and the central spectacular scenes, the ballet of the seasons, the dance of the emotions, the palace of Empire, the animated dolls, the Dutch gardeners with their Tulip dance, and many other features, in turn win approval.

OPERA HOUSE—"ROBINSON CRUSOE."

At 2.15 to-day, and again at 7.55, the Ben. and John Fuller management will repeat their successful pantomime extravaganza, "Robinson Crusoe," with Victor Prince in the name-part, Nellie Kolle as Will Atkins, the dashing hero of many adventures, and innumerable ballets, songs, choruses, brought in as the burlesque development of the Oriental story makes progress. The sensational Devil's Whirl by the daring Staig troupe and fairies, shells, nymphs, and butterflies, are all concerned in the general success of the piece.

PANTOMIME AT THE HIPPODROME.

There will be a 2 o'clock matinee to-day at Wirth's Hippodrome Theatre of the new pantomime on "Jack and the Beanstalk," when Mabelle Morgan will appear as principal boy, with several taking songs, in association with Harry Farrow as a comical dame, and George Welch and Billie Rego to assist in the fun of the extravaganza. Mr. William Anderson's company carries on the action brightly with marches, ballets, and some of the latest spectacular effects. Plan at Nicholson's, and as notified.

TIVOLI—THE ADA REEVE SEASON.

This afternoon (2.30) and evening Miss Ada Reeve will continue her season with the attractive musical play "Winnie Brooke, Widow," in which the actress interprets the comedy role with admirable charm and buoyant humour, introducing from time to time some of the most fascinating songs in her repertoire. The whole piece makes a strong appeal to regular playgoers, as the star is pleasantly supported by such well-known artists as Clarice Blakiston, Ashton Parry, and Talleur Andrews, as well as Kennedy Allen, Harry Jacobs, Charles Albert, John Grant, and the ladies of the company.

"JACK AND THE BEANSTALK" MATINEES.

Every afternoon (2.30) at the Palace Theatre the photoplay "Jack and the Beanstalk" is screened by the William Fox management in a wonderful series of pictures, in which an army of little people figure merrily around a giant of colossal proportions. Fairy ballets and varied spectacular scenes are features in the film-scheme.

TOWN HALL ORGAN RECITAL.

This evening the City Organist will give a recital of operatic and romantic music at the Town Hall, opening with the overture to the "Bohemian Girl," and including excerpts from "La Tosca," an aria from "Samson and Delilah," and the overture to "William Tell." Mr. Ernest Truman will also play Gounod's "Serenade," Massenet's "Paradise of India" ballet, the valse lente from the "Sylvia Ballet," Nevin's "The Rosary," and his own improvisation upon "Auld Lang Syne."

THE LYCEUM.

To-day and all next week patrons of the Lyceum will see Roy Stewart on the screen in "One Shot Ross." The new programme includes "Under False Colours" and "A Hero's Fall." Charlie Chaplin will be seen for the last time to-day in "The Adventurer." De Groen's orchestra plays at the Lyceum evening sessions.

UNION PICTURE THEATRES.

"Alimony," showing Josephine Whittell, will be seen at the Crystal Palace all next week, supported by "Cassidy," the latest war pictures, and a new Triangle comedy. "Life's Whirlpool," a six-act photoplay, showing Ethel Barrymore, will be screened all next week at the Empress Theatre, supplemented by Charlie Chaplin in "The Adventurer." At the Lyric, "God's Greatest Gift," a five-act drama, starring Alice Brady, will be screened all this week, supported by a two-act Keystone comedy.

WADDINGTON'S PICTURE THEATRES.

The cast of "Babbling Tongues," which is to be shown all next week at the Strand, Pitt-street, includes Grace Valentine, James Morrison, Arthur Donaldson, and Gladden James. At the Grand, Jackie Saunders and Arthur Shirley (the Australian actor) will be seen in "A Bit of Kindling," with Charlie Chaplin in "The Immigrant" as comic relief. "Cassidy" will be screened on Monday evening next at the King's Cross Theatre, Darlinghurst, supplemented by a new story of the "Seven Pearls," No. 6, and a Triangle comedy. The matinee to-day will include Chaplin in "The Fatal Mallet." Francis X. Bushman and Beverley Bayne appear in "Their Compact," which is to be shown at the Majestic Theatre on Monday next, supplemented by a two-act Chaplin comedy, "The Adventurer," and a new episode of "The Seven Pearls" serial. Theda Bara has the principal part in a film version of "A Fool There Was," which will be screened at the Globe Theatre on Monday next. May Allison, Edward Jose, and Clifford Bruce also appear in this photo-play.

HOYT'S THEATRE.

To-day at Hoyt's, George-street, George M. Cohan will be seen on the screen in the popular American comedy, "Broadway Jones." The show at this picture house is continuous from 11 a.m. till 11.30 p.m.

GRAND BAND CONCERTS.

South Sydney Model Band, under Mr. W. Ryder, are again holding a series of concerts at the Glaciarium on Sunday evenings, as notified, commencing at 8 o'clock. The funds are to assist the band to compete for the Australasian championship. Various leading artists have been engaged, including Mr. Sid. Macdonald.

AMERICAN PICTURE PALACE.

Patrons of the American Picture Palace, Pitt-street, to-day will see Dorothy Davenport in "The Unattainable" and Charlie Chaplin in one of his comedies. The show, opposite the Criterion Theatre, is continuous, from 10.30 a.m. to 10.30 p.m.

WEST'S OLYMPIA.

At West's Olympia this afternoon "Stranded in Arcady" will be shown. This picture will be screened in the evening for the last time. The changes on Monday will include the Fox feature "Darling of Paris," and on Thursday "It Happened to Adele" will be presented.

THE WEATHER.

A decrease in the intensity and a contraction of the area affected by the rain were evident in yesterday morning's weather reports. In coastal districts north of Kiama scattered falls, mostly light in character, but moderately heavy at Nambucca (170 points) and Tweed Heads (81 points) were recorded. The only extensions to inland areas were seen in very light gaugings on the Blue Mountains and at a few places on the northern tablelands. In these two localities the heaviest registration was only 9 points. A similar amount was recorded at the Weather Bureau as the result of the showers that fell on Thursday evening and early yesterday morning.

Yesterday morning, although still cloudy to overcast at many places along the coast and tablelands, and showery at Seal Rocks and Clarence Heads, the weather showed an improvement over the previous day. In the west the 9 a.m. temperatures of from 80 to 89 deg. heralded another hot day in those parts, and indications were not lacking of the easterly drift of this body of hot air. As, however, it is being closely followed by another energetic "high," the increased temperatures will be of but short duration, and will be succeeded by a cool, squally southerly change. With the passage of the "col" between the departing and incoming "highs" sporadic thunderstorms are anticipated.

CHARGES AGAINST A MINER.

BATHURST, Friday.

Ernest William Stevenson, 24, a miner, answered four charges of signing a telegram in another name without authority, wrongfully obtaining a registered letter, refusing to pay for food and accommodation, and the theft of a gold watch and chain. He was sent to gaol for a month, was committed on one of the charges, and remanded on others.

COUNTRY NEWS.

BULLI.—A distinct improvement in the lighting of railway stations on the South Coast railway, between Scarborough and Wollongong, hitherto supplied by kerosene lamps, will shortly be made. The Austinmer Progress Association is in receipt of a letter from the Railway Commissioners, stating that arrangements have been made to have electric lighting installed in this section.

BROKEN HILL.—Mr. Perry Robinson, Commonwealth Electoral Officer for the Barrier Division, has resigned, and left to-night, en route for New Guinea, to enter on plantation work.

HARDEN.—A bush fire broke out on Kalangan Estate, about seven miles from Harden. About 50 persons quickly turned up, and only 200 acres of grass and about 20 acres of wheat were burnt. Two furrows that had been ploughed round a share farmer's plant saved it.

KEMPSEY.—Mr. George Bond, storekeeper, of Kempsey, died at South-West Rocks on Wednesday afternoon.

PENRITH.—The Rev. James M'Kee, who has been in charge of the Penrith district of the Presbyterian Church for the past 25 years, has retired from the Ministry. He always took a keen interest in local matters, and was a member of the hospital committee. At a valedictory given by his parishioners he was presented with an address and a roll of bank notes. The girls of the Bible-class also presented him with a kit-bag. The congregation of the Springwood Presbyterian Church, which is connected with the Penrith charge, also presented the retiring pastor with a roll of bank notes.

WALCHA.—Mr. S. Partridge, one of the oldest residents of the district, died on Thursday, in his 91st year. He has left 11 children, and many grandchildren, and great grandchildren.

MIGRATIONS OF MURRAY COD.

During October and November last an officer of the Fisheries Branch of the Chief Secretary's Department, who was engaged upon research work on the Murrumbidgee River, marked about 40 cod with identification discs and placed them in the river near Bringagee.

In referring to the work of the Fisheries Branch of his department, Mr. Fuller stated recently that two of these fish had since been captured. One which was released about eight miles above the Bringagee homestead on October 18 was taken by Mr. D. Adams on November 28 near the railway bridge at Narrandera, having travelled up stream in 41 days a distance of approximately 150 miles from the place of liberation. The other, which was liberated about three miles above Bringagee homestead on October 23, was taken by Messrs. S. Richards and Co., of Narrandera, on December 21, at a distance of about two miles from that town, having travelled in about 60 days a distance of over 165 miles.

Mr. Fuller added that as the object of the investigations was to ascertain the growth as well as the migrations of cod, it was unfortunate that the length of the fish was not furnished in the cases mentioned. Whilst it is well known that the larger Murray cod are "homers" and do not, as a rule, travel far from their favourite haunts, it is abundantly clear that the younger fish of that species do travel, and further data in this regard will be awaited with much interest.

It is desired that persons capturing "tagged" fish will carefully record the exact length of the specimen, as well as the place at which it was caught, and forward particulars to the Fisheries Branch, Chief Secretary's Department.

SOUTH COAST COAL MINES.

WOLLONGONG, Friday.

During the week a few of the colliery employees who were victimised as a result of the recent strike have been put on, and a further batch of names is being considered.

The final result of the ballot for the election of office-bearers of the Illawarra branch of the federation will not be announced until after the annual meeting of the delegate board, which is to be held at Wollongong next week.

The Scarborough Tunnel mine was idle to-day, it being alleged that the management endeavoured to put one wheeler to wheel off five miners in lieu of four, which has been the custom of late.

There is some dissatisfaction at the Coalcliff colliery as a result of the management suggesting the introduction of the third shift system. The executive officers of the association went to Sydney and consulted with the members of the council of the federation, who afterwards placed the position before Mr. Holme, the Industrial Registrar.

So far nothing definite has been decided upon with regard to the establishment of a tribunal to adjust the deficient place claims and other local grievances which arise from time to time.

DEATH-RATE ON SERVICE.

According to Dr. W. Hutchison, a Fellow of the American Academy of Medicine, there is every reason to believe that the total death-rate per annum in the war does not exceed 5 per cent. of the total number of individuals engaged. "Of the Allied soldiers who survive wounds six hours," he says, "90 per cent. recover; of those who reach the field hospitals 95 per cent. recover; and of those who arrive at the base hospitals the recoveries are 98 per cent. The percentage of cripplings and permanent disablings is the smallest known in history. There are fewer amputations proportionately than have ever been known. The wounds of war have been made less deadly than we ever could have imagined possible. The cost of taking life is greater in this war than in any other war. It takes somewhere between three and four tons of projectiles and explosives to kill a single individual. In earlier wars the ratio was six to seven deaths by disease to one in battle or from wounds. In the present war, speaking from the best figures, the ratio is about one death from disease for 20 deaths from wounds or in battle."

CHARGE OF MURDER.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

The tragic incident in the sand hills at Henley Beach, on December 21, when Charles Herbert Mills, a motor man, was shot dead, was inquired into by the Coroner yesterday; and William Foxell Miller was committed for trial on a charge of having murdered Mills.

THE QUESTION OF THE DAY.

The Question of To-day, of To-morrow, and of every succeeding day is

HAVE YOU USED PEARS' SOAP? If you have not, you have not done your duty by your skin and complexion. If, on the other hand—that is, on both hands, and on the face, and on the skin generally—you HAVE USED PEARS', you can feel happy, for you will have done the best that possibly can be done for the skin's health and beauty. There can be no question about that.

THE BRITISH VAUXHALL

Is always doing great feats to prove its remarkable endurance, quality, and efficiency.

THE LATEST IS THE BRISBANE-SYDNEY RECORD.

640 miles in 26 hrs. 2 mins., driven throughout by myself.

3 HOURS 25 MINS. FASTER THAN PREVIOUS RECORD.

47 MINUTES FASTER THAN THE EXPRESS.

EVERY VAUXHALL LONG DISTANCE RECORD HAS BEEN DRIVEN THROUGHOUT BY ONE INDIVIDUAL WITHOUT ANY RELIEF.

THIS ALONE SPEAKS VOLUMES FOR VAUXHALLS' SWEET AND EASY CONTROL.

THE VAUXHALL HAS BEEN THE FIRST CAR TO BEAT TRAIN TIME BETWEEN ALL CAPITALS, VIZ.,

MELBOURNE-ADELAIDE .... 580 miles in 14 hrs. 55 mins.
MELBOURNE-SYDNEY .... 575 miles in 16 hrs. 55 mins.
BRISBANE-SYDNEY .... 640 miles in 26 hrs. 2 mins.

TOTAL, 1795 MILES, AT AN AVERAGE OF 31 MILES PER HOUR, WITH SMALLER ENGINES THAN ALL OTHER COMPETITORS.

ALL THIS WITH AUSTRALIAN DUNLOP TYRES.

These are recent additions to Vauxhalls' unequalled Australian Record of performances since 1910 under your own conditions.

BUT BEST OF ALL IS THE REALLY WONDERFUL REPUTATION THE VAUXHALL HAS EARNED UNDER SEVERE WAR CONDITIONS, WHERE IT IS UNANIMOUSLY PROCLAIMED

"THE FINEST CAR ON ACTIVE SERVICE."

The Vauxhall waiting list is growing rapidly.

If you want "THE CAR SUPER-EXCELLENT" after war, write for full particulars of the Vauxhall Waiting List, and place your order now to ensure delivery in your turn.

DODGE BROTHERS MOTOR CAR.

CAREFULLY AND CONSCIENTIOUSLY MADE.

ECONOMICAL AND EFFICIENT.

CONSULT THE IMPRESSION UPPERMOST IN YOUR MIND, AND YOU WILL FIND THAT YOU THINK OF THIS CAR AS VERY CAREFULLY AND CONSCIENTIOUSLY MADE.

THIS VERY GENERAL AND INSTINCTIVE FEELING IS, OF COURSE, A REFLECTION OF THE ACTUAL FACTS.

PEOPLE THINK OF THE CAR IN THIS LIGHT BECAUSE OF THEIR HIGH OPINION OF DODGE BROTHERS AS MANUFACTURERS.

THAT GOOD OPINION IS JUSTIFIED BY THE PERFORMANCE OF THE CAR, BY ITS ECONOMY AND EFFICIENCY, AND BY THE FACT THAT EVEN THE FIRST TWO YEARS' VERY LARGE PRODUCTION DID NOT DEVELOP A SINGLE FAULT.

IT WILL PAY YOU TO EXAMINE THIS CAR.

DALGETY AND CO., LTD., AGENTS, 136-138 PHILLIP-ST, SYDNEY.

HUDSON SUPER-SIX.

THE SUPREME CAR.

THE HUDSON SUPER-SIX IS NOT BUILT FOR SPEED. BUT SPEED IS ONE WAY TO PROVE ITS EFFICIENCY. IT HAS MADE THE FASTEST SPEED EVER PUT ON RECORD BY A TOURING STOCK CAR.

IT HAS THE MOST POWERFUL MOTOR IN THE WORLD, WITH LIKE CYLINDER CAPACITY. A NEW PRINCIPLE, PATENTED BY HUDSON, HAS ADDED 80 PER CENT. TO MOTOR EFFICIENCY.

THIS SIZE OF MOTOR, AT ITS BEST, USED TO DELIVER ABOUT 42-HORSE POWER. IN THE SUPER-SIX IT DELIVERS 76-HORSE POWER.

SUCH RESERVE POWER AS THIS—THE ADDITIONAL 80 PER CENT.—COMES THROUGH ENDING VIBRATION. THE MOTOR FRICTION, WHICH CAUSED WEAR, IS REDUCED TO ALMOST NOTHING. ENGINE LIFE IS NEARLY DOUBLED.

NEVER WAS A CAR SO FLEXIBLE. NEVER ONE WITH SUCH EASY MOTION AT HIGH SPEED. THESE FACTS CAN BE EASILY PROVED BY A TRIAL RUN.

"THE Oakland SENSIBLE-SIX"

IS A BIG CAR. The seats have ample width to accommodate 3 large people without any crowding, also providing more legroom than any other car in it, class.

VERY POWERFUL. The six-cylinder valve-in-head motor is rated at 19.6 R.A.C., but it develops 41 actual h.p. at 2500 r.p.m., being 1 h.p. for every 55lb of car weight.

EXCEPTIONALLY ECONOMICAL. The medium weight—wonderful springs—small, efficient engine—and over size tyres, have resulted in producing exceptional economy in running expenses. 25-30 miles to the gallon of petrol and 10,000 miles on a set of tyres are often obtained by Oakland owners.

AND COMFORTABLE. The long wheelbase and 51-inch semi elliptic rear springs, underslung, produce a riding comfort which will surprise any motorist.

MANUFACTURING EFFICIENCY.

Nothing could more clearly indicate the constructive ability and unlimited financial backing of the men who control the fortunes of the Paige Company than the achievement of setting the world an example in manufacturing efficiency.

Without actually visiting the immense Paige plant, without inspecting the wonderful efficiency methods that have reduced production costs to the very minimum, without watching the skill and care of Paige mechanics at their work, without really seeing the system of inspection that safeguards the quality and accuracy of every piece of material, you would hardly believe them possible, and to have visited such a plant and understand the processes of construction is an experience of which any man might proudly boast.

CHEAP CASH REGISTERS

are dangerous. They can be bought from dealers who have no special incentive to be scrupulous, and who have no reputation to maintain.

Some Tricks of the Dealer:—

1. A 12-year-old "National" was recently sold for £22 because it was a "big" register, and had had "four or five" years' use. We sold the same model new for £17.

2. A 15-year-old Register had the amount keys altered from 3d, 6d, 9d, etc, to pennies, but the adding wheels still recorded threepennies. The buyer "discovered" this after he had paid his good £10 to the dealer. We sell the same Register, with correct keys and wheels, from £5 up.

3. A brightly re-nickelled Register 20 years of age, was sold for £12. The mechanism had not been overhauled, and it soon cost the buyer more than a brand new one.

4. Patched and tinkered parts, and repairs attempted by so-called (but incompetent) mechanics, soon make the dealer's "cheap" Cash Register dearer than a new one.

5. "Good as new," "Only slightly used," "Absolutely guaranteed," and misleading statements about the prices of new Registers deceive buyers who are not shrewd enough to consult us first.

Better stick to the old firm. We have a reputation to maintain. Our users will tell you that they have always had a square deal and good value. We buy and sell second-hand Registers that are any good. Dealers are welcome to the old, worn-out ones which they call "good as new" after patching them up.

A VERY SERIOUS PROBLEM!
1916—1917—1918.

IS YOUR BILLET BETTER NOW than it was last year?

Are you progressing, standing still, or sliding back? Will you be in a better position next year? It means everything to you to be able to answer these questions satisfactorily.

IF YOU ARE A SENSIBLE MAN you must admit that you can't get a better position unless you are worth it. In other words, you will have to gain more knowledge before you can hope to gain more money.

WHY NOT GAIN MORE KNOWLEDGE, and earn more money? Perhaps the only difficulty you have is in deciding upon the subjects that you should study and the College that is to instruct you.
